Mr. Hoover Sees Mr. Sloan.
What Fitzsimmons Did.
A New Secret Plane.
Ford Surprises Berlin.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

PRESIDENT HOOVER has discussed the business situation with Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of General Motors. With tens of thousands of skilled employes, a gigantic payroll, and agencies that cover the United States, Mr. Sloan probably possesses unusually exact knowledge of conditions.

That he does not allow our "slump" to discourage him is shown in General Motors announcement of a new 12-cylinder model, extending the range of Cadillac cars to cover the 8-cylinder, 12-cylinder and 16-cylinder class.

EVERYTHING PASSES, and is forgotten. Soon men will be asking: "Do you remember that slump and how seriously we took it?" And stocks will go to prices not known before.

Nobody knows what ultimate values will be in this country, stock values, and real estate values. You will see land sell at $1,000 a square foot, $43,000,000 an acre. Terrible thought for earnest single-taxers.

The referee counted nine. Fitzsimmons told about it:

"I lay there on my back half dreaming. Suddenly I said to myself, I'll bet I am not dreaming at all. I am in a fight and I have been knocked out. I jumped up, hit Peter Maher one crack and he didn't come to for an hour."

THAT'S WHAT prosperity will do to this slump after the referee, Mr. Depression, has counted a little while longer.

Meanwhile, the wise will buy things while they are cheap.

AN ARMY PLANE, the secrets of its construction carefully guarded, has submitted, and endured successfully, savage tests over Mitchel Field, on Long Island, yesterday. Pilots looking on, kept at a distance from the secretly-built plane, said it was "literally banged about the sky, for more than an hour, like a football kicked around the field."

It dived with power on, at a rate of 300 miles an hour, the pilot proving perfect control at all speeds, under all conditions.

PRESIDENT HOOVER has concentrated attention on aviation experiment, procuring double the appropriation for experimental purposes.

One result is the development of a "cowl" over the engine, that adds 15 miles an hour to the speed of every airplane using it.

The fact that the President, an able engineer, is personally and intensely interested in aviation development is important news.

MILLIONS OF Americans would be delighted to read from the President a statement of this kind:

"On such a date, a United States airplane will leave Washington, cross the Atlantic, fly over London, Paris, Berlin, Moscow, Constantinople, cross the Bosphorus, and, without stopping, land in Asia, at the new Turkish capital, regardless of weather, or any condition."

That would be a fine advertisement for this country, which should not depend on the individual qualities of Capt. Hawks, or the initiative of private concerns, for its flying reputation.

In Berlin, 126,000 metal workers quit work, refusing to accept wage cuts of from 6 to 8 per cent.

On that very day, Mr. Ford sent to all employes of his factory in Berlin a latter announcing a raise in wages from 2 marks 40 pfennigs per hour to 2 marks 50 pfennigs, not a big raise, but better than a cut.

MR. FORD said nothing about benevolence, or noble philanthropy. He told his men that the quality of their work justified an increase, and the additional pay would add to their purchasing power, a good thing all around.

The prosperous should remember that prosperity is based on good wages, and nothing else.

THERE IS SOME humor in our "noble experiment," prohibition.

Jewish rabbis may no longer order wine needed for their congregations.

They must give the name of each member of the congregation, and issue to each member a prescription, as doctors do.

To carry out this plan, the government must establish retail wine shops in big cities, and spend large sums, checking individual prescriptions.

THIS WAS probably not foreseen by the founder of Christianity when he changed water into wine at the wedding feast.

Good prohibitionists tell you it was wine without alcohol. But the Bible does not say that, and the wedding guests would probably have said: "In that case, give us the plain water."

ADULTS HARDENED by years, by contact with the world and the ossification that goes on inside the skull, should remember that children, more sensitive than their elders, feel sorrow and disgrace more keenly.

In Detroit, a 14-year-old girl, accused of smoking cigarets, was expelled from school, denied the charge, brooded over it, drowned herself.

Those responsible will say "We had no idea she would kill herself."

There is always danger when a child is treated with cruel severity. The result may not be suicide, but there is always intense suffering and often a career injured.

TECH, IRISH ON EDGE FOR CLASH

Grid Followers Throughout Country Await Outcome Of Intersectional Battle

By JESS CARVER,
Staff Correspondent.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Oct. 18.—With the acclaim of the nation awaiting the victor, and the honor and glory that goes with the recording of triumph over an old and honorable foe the prize, Carnegie Tech and Notre Dame meet today in Notre Dame's new stadium in their eighth gridiron meeting.

When the tower of the church on Notre Dame campus points out the hour of two (3 o'clock Pittsburgh time), those two famed exponents of the intricate intercollegiate sport, Knute K. Rockne and Wally Steffen, will send their respective and highly formidable machines in operation against each other. The game is the game of the day, outranking any other that is on the menu of the nation in point of importance and class.

Carnegie-Notre Dame struggles, since their birth in 1922, have risen with extraordinary bloom until they have gained a place in the football sun of extreme importance. In the seven battles to date, Carnegie has won twice, Notre Dame five times.

OUTCOME TOSS-UP

Today's struggle, between two undefeated elevens, would appear to be a toss-up. It is to be a battle of wits between two old masters; a struggle to the death between the Irish and the Scotch.

Buffalo University, Thiel and Georgia Tech have been routed decisively by the Tartans of Old Carnegie. Two foes of greater repute, Southern Methodist and Navy, have toppled before the onslaught of Notre Dame.

It is the opinion of this observer that Carnegie will win today. The Tartan line, a rugged,

STUDENT HURT IN AUTO CRASH

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Oct. 18.—Thomas Dunn, 18, of 1101 North Highland avenue, Pittsburgh, was injured in a crash involving two automobiles and a street car here last night. Dunn is a sophomore in the arts school at Notre Dame University.

Robert Driscoll, of Ithaca, N. Y., was killed in the smashup. He suffered a fractured skull and internal injuries and died after being removed to St. Joseph Hospital.

Dunn, whose injuries are not believed to be serious, was badly bruised. Two other Notre Dame students and Frank Justice and Mrs. Justice and their young child were also injured.

CRASH ENDS AUSTRALIA AIR RACE

Kingsford Smith's Rival In Dash Cracks Plane Attempting Takeoff

LONDON, Oct. 18.—An impromptu race from England to Australia between Wing Commander Charles Kingsford-Smith and Flight Lieut. C. W. Hill ended suddenly today when the latter cracked up his plane in attempting to resume flight after a forced landing in the Dutch East Indies.

A short time later a message from Koepang, Island of Timor, to Sydney, N. S. W., said that Kingsford-Smith had turned back from his trip across the Timor Sea to Port Darwin, Northern Australia, and had landed at Atamboeo Harbor. His return to Atamboeo presumably precluded his reaching Port Darwin today.

According to various dispatches received here, Hill was forced to land on a beach while flying between Koepang and Atamboeo, Timor Islands. In attempting to take off again, the machine overturned, badly damaging the motor. Hill, the reports stated, escaped without injury.

MURDER HINTED IN GIRL'S DEATH

DENVER, Col., Oct. 18.—(AP.)—An autopsy was ordered today on the body of 10-year-old Leona O'Loughlin, found yesterday in Berkeley Lake, two days after she had disappeared from her home. She was the daughter of City Detective Leo O'Loughlin.

Authorities ordering the autopsy said they were considering the possibility the child had been murdered and the body thrown in the lake.

The child's stepmother, Mrs. Leo O'Loughlin, was taken to police headquarters and questioned at length after the discovery of the body. Frank O'Loughlin, brother of the detective, who roomed at the O'Loughlins', was also questioned. Neither could throw light on the girl's disappearance.

Representatives of generations of wealth in the East and of antebellum Virginia aristocracy, together with titled foreigners, arrived yesterday for the ceremony, described as one of the most imposing in recent Baltimore history.

Freight Car Yields Liquor in Chicago

CHICAGO, Oct. 18.—(AP.)—Prohibition agents yesterday seized 250 cases of imported liquors estimated by them to be worth $100,000, in a freight car in a South Side railroad yard. The car had been shipped from Jacksonville, Fla.

HONOR HEARST IN OAKLAND

OAKLAND, Cal., Oct. 18.—(Universal.)—Another stirring tribute to the achievements of William Randolph Hearst as an American newspaperman and an American citizen was voiced yesterday by Oakland and her sister cities in the East Bay district.

The Oakland welcome began in San Francisco when a committee greeted him at the Palace Hotel and escorted him across the bay.

It ended at a public dinner at the Hotel Oakland, where business leaders, officials, veterans, officials of the University of California and representatives of women's organizations acclaimed Mr Hearst as one of the most distinguished citizens that California has ever given the nation.

NOTABLES THRONG HALL

The ivory ball room of the Hotel Oakland was thronged with men and women whose names rank high in their community, when Oakland's honored guest arrived. And the enthusiasm which greeted the speakers, as they dwelt upon Mr. Hearst's contributions to civic welfare, was exceeded only once during the evening. That was when the publisher stepped before

Dynamite Damages Kansas City Theater

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 18.—(AP.)—An explosion, believed by police to have been caused by dynamite, damaged the front of a suburban theater here early today. Police said the manager of the theater recently discharged members of one union to employ a member of a rival organization.

Jones' Trick Course Score Tied by Girl

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Oct. 18.—(AP.)—There's a girl who has had as good a score as Bobby Jones on a golf course. But it was the cute, tricky little affair of Harold Lloyd, film comedian. Miss Edith Quier did it in 35, the same as Bobby when he visited the Coast last fall.

W. R. Hearst Sees Nations Of Europe Heading For New War

OAKLAND, CAL., Oct. 18.

Following is the speech of William Randolph Hearst at the dinner given him last night in the Hotel Oakland by East Bay civic and business leaders:

Ladies and gentlemen:

This is the last of the series of receptions which have been graciously given me by my kind friends.

I have delighted in each and every one of them.

I am deeply grateful for all this kindness and courtesy, and I shall remember them with happiness as long as I live.

I am glad that the climax and culmination of these receptions should have occurred here in Oakland so near my mother's home where I used to live, so near the great university she was so deeply interested in, and among the friends I have known for so many years.

But when this delightful occasion is concluded, I am going to board a train and go down to my ranch and find my little hide-away on my little hill-top at San Simeon and look down on the blue sea and up at the blue sky, and bask in the glorious sunshine of the greatest state of the greatest nation in the whole world.

You know, my friends, it is about time that I finished my Nauheim cure.

I went to Nauheim this summer and after I had taken the baths for four weeks, my doctor said to me:

"Now, Mr. Hearst, you must pick out some nice quiet secluded spot, and take another four weeks of complete rest and repose. That is the after-cure."

So I picked out Paris and had no sooner settled down for a nice quiet rest in my hotel on the appropriately named "Place of Concord," than the French government decided that I was an enemy to the peace and safety of the republic and invited me to leave the country.

Then I went over to England and there I was given dinners and made addresses; and then, I wrote articles telling the English government just exactly what to do in order to make everybody contented and happy.

And the English people evidently thought that I must know about these things on account of my signal success in making the French people so contented and happy.

And then I came back to America and made speeches at New York and Boston and Chicago and Los Angeles and San Francisco and I have not had my after-cure yet.

My friends, I think I have told about all there is to be told about the treaty we secured and how we secured it, and why we secured it.

You know that America went into the great war to save the Allies from destruction and that we did

BLAST INJURING 43 ACCIDENT

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 18.—(AP.)—Fire and police authorities today continued their investigation of the explosion which virtually wrecked the 12-story Garment Capitol Building and injured 43 persons here yesterday, but were inclined to believe the blast was an accident rather than sabotage, as was first thought.

Meanwhile the 43 injured passersby and garment makers were reported recovering.

While sabotage at first was suspected, as the investigation progressed, the authorities leaned toward conviction the explosion was caused by the accidental ignition of illuminating gas, which they said had been seeping through the building for weeks.

Hyman Schuman, proprietor of the shop in which the blast occurred, vigorously denied that strikers were involved.

M'Kinley Kidnaping Suspect to be Freed

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 18.—(AP.)—Police announced today their intention of releasing Raymond Rizzo, 21-year-old floater from New York, arrested Thursday for investigation in connection with the recent kidnaping of Mrs. Alma Wilson McKinley, Greenfield (Mo.) heiress, from her home. Police are convinced Rizzo was not connected with the crime.

COLD DRIVES JOBLESS TO SHELTER

Mercury Will Fall to 30, Says Brotzman; Hundreds Ask Charities for Refuge

Pittsburgh and Western Pennsylvania had a foretaste of winter today as the mercury dipped to 36 degrees, accompanied by heavy frost and with prospects of clear, freezing weather tonight. The temperature is expected to fall to 30 degrees tonight.

The thermometer began falling yesterday as blustery rain pelted pedestrians. The mercury had dropped 28 degrees this morning compared with yesterday, as skies partly cleared. The rain totaled 19 hundredths of an inch. The temperature probably will not rise above 45 today, Forecaster W. S. Brotzman said. Tonight's low will be around 30, according to his prediction.

The season's coldest night drove hundreds of homeless and unemployed men to seek warmth, food and shelter from charitable institutions.

More than 1,000 men were lodged and fed at the "Helping Hand," a lodging house for unemployed at 439 Water street. It was the largest number sheltered since its opening 10 days ago, Alexander Gibson, director, said.

HOOVER MOVES TO AID JOBLESS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—(AP.)—Government measures for reducing unemployment will be given increased effectiveness to meet the prospect of increased suffering this winter.

President Hoover, following a meeting with his cabinet yesterday, announced he had formed a committee, composed of six cabinet members and Gov. Meyer, of the Federal Reserve Board, to draw up a program for continuing in strengthened form the federal employment activities.

The government will seek to increase direct federal employment in public works, but the emphasis of the presidential program will be placed on co-operation with governors and employment organizations in regional measures for relief, and consultation with the principal industries on methods for keeping up their output and their employment.

Mother Kills Child, Slashes Herself

ZANESVILLE, O., Oct. 18.—(INS.)—Mrs. Jean Turner, 30, hacked to death her 5-year-old daughter, Ruth Evelyn, today and then slashed her own throat in an attempted suicide at their home near Chandlersville, southeast of here, police said. The woman is near death in a local hospital.

Hospital Wants Diamond To Leave After Threat

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—(AP.)—Jack Diamond, Broadway racketeer, presented the figure today of a man nobody wants. In Polyclinic Hospital he is recovering from the bullets and blows inflicted by enemy gangsters in his room in the Monticello Hotel last Sunday.

Directors of the hospital told police authorities of their desire to be rid of him yesterday after an anonymous telephone message informed the hospital officials the institution would be bombed to finish Diamond off. The directors said his presence was disturbing other patients and disrupting the hospital routine.

But police replied they did not want Diamond and only doubled the guard of uniformed patrolmen and detectives stationed about the hospital to repel any possible invasion by the wounded man's enemies. The warning against a bomb plot was regarded as the gesture of a crank.

Doctors said his left arm would very likely be paralyzed as the result of the bullet wound in the chest near the shoulder, which severed a ligament.

Germany Stirred by Report Kaiser Finances Fascists

BERLIN, Oct. 18.—(AP.)—Considerable interest was aroused here today by a story carried in the Achtuhr Abendblatt alleging that the former Kaiser was giving financial support to the Fascist party, which recently increased its representation in the Reichstag from 12 to 107.

The paper, which gave no authority for its story, said the money had never been sent directly to the party but had gone through the medium of various monarchistic organizations which developed unusual activity prior to the elections and through Prince August Wilhelm, chief politician of the younger Hohenzollerns.

The article alleged that American financial support had been withdrawn from the Fascists, necessitating aid from other sources. The Jewish Telegraph Agency also said the former Kaiser was the financial angel of the Fascists.

HEMPHILL, PINCHOT CLASH ON G. O. P. TESTIMONIAL

STATEMENT ON MEETING DRAWS FIRE

Liberal-Democrat Retorts To Foe After Hearing Him Talk in Johnstown Hotel

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Oct. 18.—(AP.)—After an exchange of verbal fire here last night, the two candidates for Pennsylvania's governorship left here today—Gifford Pinchot, the Republican, starting westward with 17 stops on his schedule, and John M. Hemphill, Democrat-Liberal, moving eastward.

The crossing of their paths here last night furnished the first bitter encounter of the two since the campaign opened.

Pinchot, addressing a testimonial dinner arranged for him in a hotel here by the Cambria County Republican committee, was telling his audience that a similar meeting had been arranged for Hemphill by the Democratic County committee, but that it had been "called off."

"MONUMENTAL LIE"

Hemphill entered the hotel lobby just as his opponent's words were being carried throughout the room by a loudspeaker.

Hemphill called newspaper men to him and branded his opponent's statement as a "monumental lie." He asserted that after his noon meeting here, he and his party had toured the northern section of the county with a night meeting in Spangler.

Pinchot, in his address, said he was opposed to "forced" political assessment of state job-holders to finance the Republican state campaign. He objected, he said, to "use of force even by inference," and rebuked Matthew H. Taggart, state insurance commissioner, for sending a letter to employes of his department requesting contributions.

DAVIS SPEAKER

Secretary of Labor James J. Davis, candidate for the United States Senate, also spoke. He said he was in favor of a protective tariff, and praised President Hoover's efforts to relieve the nation's unemployment situation. Philip H. Dewey, candidate for secretary of internal affairs, and local candidates for Congress and the State Legislature also spoke.

Unregistered Hemphill Backers Plead for Vote

Two members of the money-raising committee of the Liberal party backing John M. Hemphill, Democratic nominee for governor, who did not register as a voter on either of the three registration days this year, have filed petitions for a special enrollment at the court house office of the Registration Commission, according to the records there.

ABSENCE AN EXCUSE

Leon Falk, Jr., filed with the registration commission a few minutes before the close of business yesterday, a petition as a preliminary to being qualified to vote November 4.

A. E. Braun filed a petition October 10 asking to be enrolled as a voter. The petition gives "Absence, etc.," as the reason for not being registered.

Persons seeking to be enrolled by petition are required by law to convince the Registration Commissioners that unavoidable absence from the city or serious illness prevented them from appearing at their polling place on either of the three prescribed days. The petitioner must state where he was and what he was doing on each day.

Under the law, no action can be taken by the commissioners on a petition for three days after it was filed in order to permit objectors to protest the enrollment.

County Commissioner C. C. McGovern, western field marshal of Pinchot's primary campaign, charged Friday that 11 of the 23 Pittsburgh members of the Liberal party's money-raising committee were not registered and could not vote November 4.

Pinchot Due Here Tomorrow for Rest

Gifford Pinchot, Republican nominee for governor, is expected here tomorrow to rest, and to confer with Western Pennsylvania leaders. He is due to arrive in the morning and meet after luncheon with representatives of labor unions.

Pinchot is scheduled to leave Monday noon to continue his campaign tour in Westmoreland County.

2 DEMOCRATIC STREET MEETS

Democratic street meetings will be held tonight at North Side City Hall, Federal and Ohio streets, and at Lowrie street fire engine house, Troy Hill, according to Ralph E. Smith, chairman of the meetings and speakers committee.

The former location will be in charge of W. F. Neely, Democratic chairman of the Twenty-second Ward, and Vincent Gavin, chairman of the Twenty-fourth Ward, will preside at the Troy Hill meeting.

Speakers at both meetings will include Edward E. Michalowski, nominee for Congress; Gustave O. H. Hammer, for state senator; Christian J. Estel, and Edward J. Caye.

Court Upholds Lien Against Hotel Firm

Benno Janssen and W. Y. Cocken, Jr., architects, were granted permission by Federal Judge R. M. Gibson to carry out prosecution to a final judgment of a mechanic's lien against the Pittsburgh Hotels Corporation, which they instituted in Common Pleas Court, before the hotel corporation was placed under receivership by the United States District Court.

The lien, for approximately $60,000, is for services rendered on the new addition of the William Penn Hotel.

HEMPHILL WILL WIN—MAURER

John M. Hemphill, Democratic-Liberal nominee for governor, will be elected in the opinion of one of his opponents, James M. Maurer, Socialist nominee, who passed through Pittsburgh today on his way to Erie.

Maurer, a former president of the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor, said:

"Gifford Pinchot, Republican nominee for governor, will be defeated because of the Socialist party's exposure that he is not as friendly to labor as he poses to be.

"However, it makes no difference to Pennsylvania labor whether he or Hemphill is elected, as both represent the same group of interests."

Pinchot will be here tomorrow for conferences with representatives of local labor unions.

Weather will continue partly overcast to clear over most of the route, with probability of snow flurries along the lakes tonight; ceilings will probably be ample most of the time and visibilities excellent except during a snow flurry near the lakes; winds will continue west or southwest and light to moderate; temperatures will drop further tonight over the eastern portion of the route, and will change but little over the western portion.

15-HOUR EFFORT FAILS TO SAVE WOMAN'S LIFE

Inhalators Lose Battle With Death as Mrs. Prichard Dies After Operation

Efforts of emergency squads from the Mines Safety Appliance Corporation to save the life of Mrs. Mildred Prichard, 23, of 1447 Beechwood boulevard, who ceased to breath following an operation in the Elizabeth Steel Magee Hospital, proved vain last night when the young woman died shortly after 10 o'clock.

Four teams of two men each worked in relays for more than 15 hours in their vain attempt to bring back respiration.

Mrs. Prichard, daughter-in-law of Attorney Charles B. Prichard, was operated on yesterday for appendicitis and shortly afterward suffered a relapse, apparently ceasing to breathe. Calls for an inhalator were sent to police at the Oakland station and later to the Hazelwood station.

OUT OF ORDER

It is alleged that the police inhalators were not functioning properly. Another was brought from Central station and finally the help of the Mines Safety Appliances Corporation was sought.

Throughout all of yesterday and last night the men labored in effort to start natural breathing for the unconscious woman. Physicians and nurses stood by and helped. It was not until 10:15 o'clock that the young woman was pronounced dead.

START QUIZ

Attorney Prichard is former Director of Public Safety.

Reports of the inability of the police from two stations to respond to an emergency call for inhalators has resulted in Police Superintendent Peter P. Walsh ordering an investigation. According to experts the only trouble likely with the police inhalators was that they were empty.

In ordering the investigation, Walsh said:

"Strict orders went out months ago that every station was to keep an inhalator on hand for just such emergencies. If negligence is proved, drastic action will be taken."

CALVERT CASE UP NOV. 5

Disbarment proceedings against Attorney George H. Calvert will be heard November 5 by a committee of the board of governors of the Pennsylvania Bar Association, it was announced today. The hearing will be held in Pittsburgh.

The board recommended the disbarment of former Judge Henry G. Wasson, whose appeal from that recommendation is pending before the State Supreme Court. Charges against both are as a result of their alleged mismanagement of the $3,000,000 estate of the late Frederick Davidson, steel manufacturer.

Prohibition Loses At Vote in Mexico

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 18.—(AP.)—A motion sponsored by the Yucatan delegation providing for National prohibition in the manufacture, sale and consumption of alcoholic liquors was defeated in the Chamber of Deputies today by a vote of 16 to 4. The deputies pointed out that the national anti-alcohol commissioner's temperance campaign was best applicable to the country. The commission was created during the administration of Portes Gil.

3 SAID TO ADMIT HOLDUP KILLING

Three Negro suspects were turned over by Donora and Monessen police to Allegheny County detectives today, after they were said to have confessed taking part in the holdup of an Elizabeth butcher shop, October 4, in which August Braum, Jr., the proprietor, was shot and killed.

The Negroes are said to have admitted entering the shop and firing at Braum when he threw a meat cleaver at them, but to have denied knowing they had killed him.

Two of the suspects were shot down yesterday by Donora police when they attempted to flee after being cornered in a Donora poolroom. Neither was seriously wounded.

They gave their names as Joe Williams, 22, and his brother, Clarence, 20, of Clairton. The third suspect is Robert Smith, who had been held by Monessen police.

Helpful Police Work Hard on Stolen Car

CHICAGO, Oct. 18.—(AP.)—The motor car that eight Negro boys had out in the street just wouldn't go. Along came two accommodating policemen and began to try their luck at tinkering with the machine, but they had no more success than the boys, despite two hours of hard work.

Sergt. Martin Keeman, attracted by the gathering, came up and started to ask questions, which proved to be somewhat embarrassing, as it was brought out in court that the car had been stolen.

1 KILLED, 6 HURT TRAFFIC TOLL

One man was killed by a hit-and-run motorist early today, and six persons were injured, five in a head-on collision of a truck and street car on the North Side, last night.

Morgue attaches today were seeking the identity of a man, about 65, who was killed when struck by a hit-and-run driver on the William Penn highway five miles east of Wilkinsburg. The driver of the machine increased his speed after knocking the victim into a ditch.

Five persons were injured when a truck and a street car crashed head on in East General Robinson street. The victims were Mary M. Taylor, 25, of St. John street, McKees Rocks; Annie Fallon, of North Atlantic avenue, and James Shields, 30, of 254 Maryland avenue, passengers on the car; Motorman Thomas Lydon, 42, of 3835 Atkins streeet, and Conductor H. M. Cochran, of 736 Ravenwood street, Ross Township. Their injuries were of a minor nature, it was reported. Lewis Brown, 36, of 1502 Forbes street, arrested as the driver, denied operating the truck, police said. He was in the driver's seat when arrested, according to police.

Festus Lacey, 59, of 705 Fourteenth street, Munhall, was in Homestead Hospital today suffering from a possible fracture of the skull and lacerations of the scalp and both legs as a result of being struck by an automobile in Eleventh avenue and Amity street, Homestead, last night. Robert Cook, 19, of 405 Eleventh avenue, Munhall, who, police said, was driver of the car, was arrested, but released under bond later.

Hurt, Claims Trolley Car Passed Signal

Mrs. Jennie Zeh, of Pittsburgh, alleged she was knocked down and dragged by the fender of a street which failed to heed a red traffic signal at Grant street and Fourth avenue April 19 last, in her suit against the Pittsburgh Railways Company in Common Pleas Court. The suit, in which her husband, H. E. Zeh, joined, asked $60,000 damages.

Break $200 Window To Steal Clothing

After tossing a brick through a plate glass window of the Al Berk Clothing Company, 1013 Fifth avenue, robbers early this morning escaped with clothing valued at $200, according to police. The value of the window was placed at $200.

FIRE 15 MORE BOY POSTAL CARRIERS

Dismissal Comes After 11 A Charged With Destroyi Special Delivery Ma

Following the hearings b fore the United States Co missioner of the 11 special d livery messengers of the Pitt burgh postoffice, accused emmbezzling and destroyi letters handed them for deli ery, 15 other messengers we dismissed from the service, in a dition to those arrested.

The dismissals were recom mended by Postoffice Inspecto H. L. Getchell and L. C. Kenned whose investigation led to 10 me sengers being held by the commi sioner for action by the feder grand jury and another held for further hearing. In the course the investigation each of the special delivery messengers at tached to the Pittsburgh office was interrogated.

Some of those arrested signed written confessions, in which they admitted destroying from 10 to 100 letters. Most of the letters were from a Pittsburgh installment house, containing correspondence to creditors. During the last two years a large number of such letters never reached their destination, according to the inspectors. Instead, some of th messengers arrested signed forge receipts, the inspectors said.

Three of the 10 held for th grand jury, John Fortney, 18, 911 Grandview avenue; Josep Isaacs, 17, of 1528 Rockland ave nue, and James W. Donahue, of 5032 Blair street, were unal to furnish $500 bonds demande by the commissioner and we sent to jail.

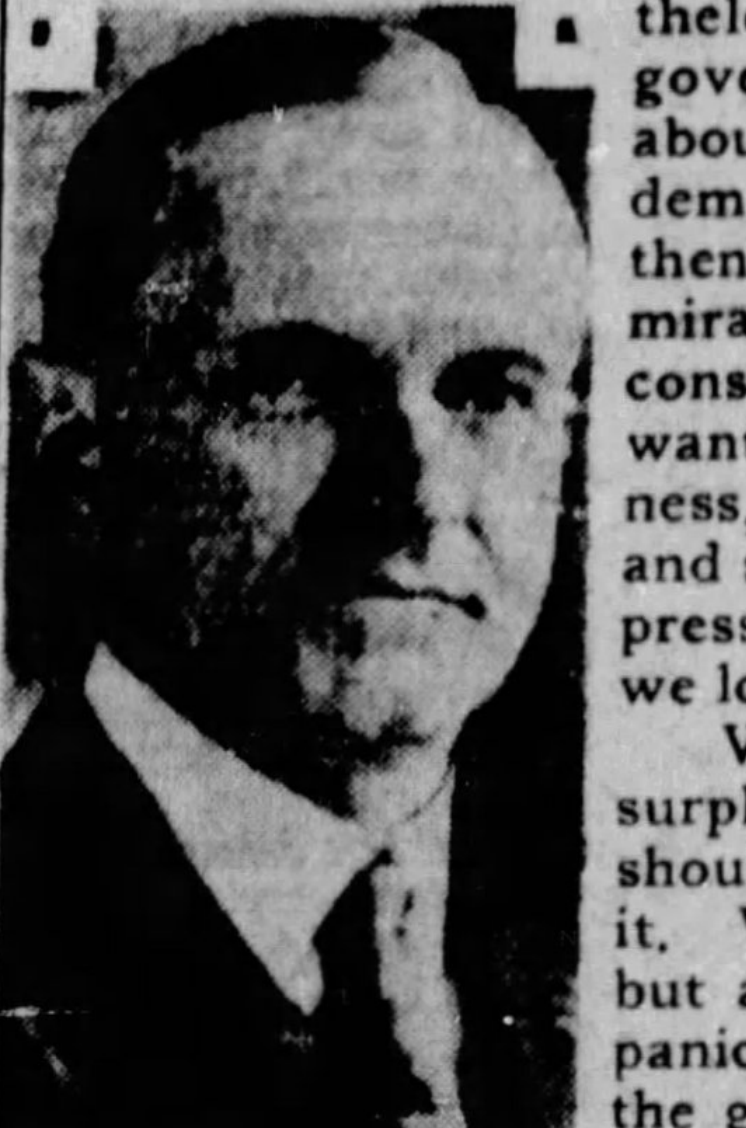
Government Can't Cure All Ills, Coolidge Says

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Oct. 18.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

If some current statements are to be taken seriously we are expecting too much from free government. Notwithstanding the excellent practice of voting our ideals, nevertheless we have a representative government that must necessarily be about what we ourselves are. We demand entire freedom of action and then expect the government in some miraculous way to save us from the consequences of our own acts. We want the right to run our own business, fix our own wages and prices, and spend our own money, but if depression and unemployment result we look to government for a remedy.



Calvin Coolidge

We insist on producing a farm surplus but think the government should find a profitable market for it. We over-indulge in speculation but ask the government to prevent panics. Now the only way to hold the government entirely responsible for conditions is to give up our liberty for a dictatorship. If we continue the more reasonable practice of managing our own affairs we must bear the burdens of our own mistakes. A free people cannot shift their responsibility for them to the government. Self government means self reliance.

CALVIN COOLIDGE.

Autos Assure Steel Future, Carnegie Tech Told

The automobile is here to stay, and will continue to be a large user of steel, Charles E. Wilson, vice president of the General Motors Corporation, declared in an address at the annual dinner of the metallurgical advisory board of the Carnegie Institute of Technology and the United States Bureau of Mines in the Pittsburgh Athletic Club last night. He declared the work of metallurgists has been a boon to the automobile industry. He concluded:

"Research work has brought vast improvements in steel making, the greater uniformity of steels for ball bearings and of alloyed steels for gears being important contributions. One thing we need is a further advace in prevention of rust and corrosion, and the development of a satisfactory material for brake drums."

Dr. Thomas S. Baker, president of Carnegie Tech, was toastmaster. Brief addresses were made by George G. Crawford, president of the Jones and Laughlin Steel Corporation; S. H. Colby, sales manager of the Aluminum Company of America; A. C. Fieldner, of the United States Bureau of Mines and H. M. Boylston, of the Case School of Applied Science, of Cleveland.

You don't know what the governor of Pennsylvania said to the governors of Ohio and West Virginia when they met at Imperial Junction! Each of the three addressed the crowd.

Lincoln-Penn Road Fete Draws Throng Despite Rainy Weather

Two governors and F. A. Seiberling, president of the National Lincoln Highway Association, spoke at the banquet in the William Penn Hotel last night which brought to an end the tri-state celebration of the Lincoln and William Penn Highways west of Pittsburgh.

With an attendance of more than a thousand, the feast ended a day's program which was carried out in spite of inclement weather which handicapped committees in charge of the West Virginia celebration at Chester, W. Va., that at Steubenville, where Ohioans held their demonstration, and the ceremonies at Imperial Junction, where Ohio and West Virginia officials joined with those of Pennsylvania to open officially the two new highways.

John S. Herron, president of Council, opened the banquet with an address of welcome, after he was introduced by James Rae, president of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce, which sponsored the huge celebration. Mr. Rae presided, while James Francis Burke was toastmaster.

OHIO EXECUTIVE ABSENT

Gov. Myers Y. Cooper, of Ohio, who was to have been a speaker at the banquet, wired his regrets at being unable to attend, as did former Gov. Gifford Pinchot. Gov. Cooper, with Gov. John S. Fisher, of Pennsylvania, and Gov. W. G. Conley, of West Virginia, spoke at Imperial Junction. Gov. Cooper had to return immediately to Ohio.

Yesterday's celebrations at points in Ohio, West Virginia and Pennsylvania were held in spite of continuous rainfall. Although outdoor celebrations were impossible in Steubenville and Chester, the celebration planned for Imperial Junction was carried out r scheduled. The other programs were held indoors.

GOVERNORS SPEAK

On a triangular pavillion constructed where the Lincoln and William Penn Highways separate, the three governors met, and spoke to the crowds gathered in the rain. They told how the new roads drew the three states together socially, culturally and economically, and they detailed the history of the two great cross-country thoroughfares.

The celebration was held under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce, whose highways and bridges committee, headed by Henry Tranter, long ago visualized the moment when the $2,500,000 project would be finished.

Sinking Mars Part of Perry Highway

GREENVILLE, Pa., Oct. 18.—A quarter-mile stretch of road on the new Perry highway, near here, is giving the State Highway Department much trouble. The road near Custards Swamp has been under construction since August 15, when filling was started.

Just as the new bed was completed the ground began to sink, and although hundreds of tons of dirt and gravel have been dumped into the hole the ground continues to sink.

State Asks Pantages Verdict Be Affirmed

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 18.—(AP.)—The state carried to the California Supreme Court yesterday its battle for affirmation of the conviction of Alexander Pantages, under a one to 50-year San Quentin prison sentence for assaulting Eunice Pringle, co-ed dancer.

The action is taken in the filing with the high court of a petition for review of the Appellate Court's recent order of a new trial for the theater magnate.

Overcome in Garage, Saved by Inhalator

BEAVER FALLS, Pa., Oct. 18.—City firemen promptly used an inhalator when Ralph Creese, 48, furnace dealer, was found unconscious in his garage from carbon monoxide. He is recovering in the Providence Hospital.

OFFICER FREED IN TUBE CRASH

Patrolman John Cahill, who was reported to have caused a collision involving four machines by falling asleep in Liberty Tubes, was discharged when arraigned last night before Alderman John Kearcher when he testified he was parked in the tube because a tire had gone flat.

Cahill testified that after the tire blew out the tube wrapped about a brake drum and stilled his machine. The other machines crashed into him and two persons were hurt as he was about to make repairs, he insisted.

Cahill was suspended and held for trial board action when it was reported that while he was supposed to be on duty he parked in the tube and fell asleep.

Commissary Robbery Suspect Sent to Jail

Charles Terril, 28, Negro, of Fourteenth street, Ambridge, alleged by Leetsdale police to have been one of two Negroes who attempted to rob the commissary of the Riter-Conley works of the McClintic-Marshall Construction Company early yesterday, was sentenced to the county workhouse for 30 days by Burgess W. C. Mercer, of Leetsdale, last night.

James Milley, night watchman at the plant, reported to police that he was beaten by two Negroes whom he surprised in the commissary. Terril was arrested a short distance away by Patrolman Roy Wilson. The other Negro escaped, the officer said.

DOGS ON REVIEW IN SOHO SHOW

Dogs of the Soho district had their innings yesterday when boys and girls held their annual dog show in the Soho Community House. Prizes were awarded by the Men's Advisory Board, of which Chester Nichols is chairman. Although the dogs did the work, the awards went to their owners, and consisted of roller skates, footballs and books.

"Patsy," owned by Thomas Lantz, of 45 Beelen street, was the largest dog entered, and "Mamie," owned by Anna Janesko, of 2420 Forbes street, the only Pekinese.

The show was in charge of Mrs. Agnes P. Raciappa, head resident of the Community House, and Joseph A. Raciappa, head of the boys' department. They were assisted by W. T. Forrester, Miss Stella W. Russell, head of the girls' department, and Miss Violet Schwartz.

HOLD GIRL, 19, IN SUICIDE TRY

Mary Grego, 19, of 816 Amity street, Homestead, was to be arraigned in Morals Court today because of her alleged attempt to end her life by drinking poison at Fifth avenue and William Penn way last night.

Police said the girl drank only a small amount, and was taken to the Allegheny General Hospital. Later she was arrested on a disorderly conduct charge and released on a forfeit.

The condition of Russell Keller, 21, a clerk, of Evergreen avenue, Millvale, who, police say, shot himself in the chest in the anteroom of the office of the Columbia Gas and Electric Company, in the Union Trust Building yesterday, was regarded as serious at Mercy Hospital today.

Commissioner Charles I. Anderson, chairman of the Oakland citizens' committee in charge of the civic reception, headed the escort which went to San Francisco to meet the publisher. The other members were Mayor John L. Davie, of Oakland, and E. B. Field, president of the Oakland Chamber of Commerce.

Ceremonies in the Oakland City Hall were planned with brevity as the keynote. There Mr. Hearst was presented with an embossed copy of the resolution passed September 24 inviting him to be the guest of the city. Executives of several East Bay cities were present and extended greetings on behalf of their communities.

SCROLL PRESENTED

Mayor Davie, principal speaker of the evening, presented the publisher with an illuminated scroll, making him an honorary citizen of Oakland. Other speakers included E. B. Field, who voiced the appreciation of the East Bay business community for Mr. Hearst's services; Phil O. Solon, speaking in behalf of all veterans' organizations; Mrs. Harry G. Hill, representing Oakland's women's clubs, and City Attorney Preston Higgins.

In introducing Mr. Hearst at the banquet, Mayor Davie said:

"Oakland takes her place tonight with the prominent cities of this country in extending a typical and truly American welcome to California's distinguished son and America's foremost patriot.

"The homecoming sentiment which has greeted our guest everywhere has been raised to high patriotic pitch by his fearless and untiring devotion to his country. He has dedicated his life to not alone the preaching of patriotism but the practicing of it. It is through the day-by-day influence of his publications that America has long been warned against too much participation in entangling European alliances. It is through his own personal service that America and the world has been able to peek through the diplomatic barriers and observe our friends and allies in relationships which had heretofore been veiled in secrecy.

LIFE OF SERVICE

"A man who dedicates his life work to such a noble purpose will be rewarded, and I predict that the praise and honor which is being bestowed on him throughout the length and breadth of this country today is but a mite in comparison to honors and rewards which await him at the hands of the American people."

Appreciation of the benefactions of the Hearst family to the University of California was voiced by Robert Sibley, executive manager of the California Alumni Association.

He told of the influence which these gifts have had, in making California a world center of higher learning. For a third of a century, Sibley declared, these benefactions have provided an inspiration to the youth of the state.

Peace in Hospital Strike Seen Monday

An amicable settlement is predicted between company representatives and union business agents at the new Allegheny General Hospital, North avenue, North Side. The 40 steamfitters and structural iron workers who have been on strike since Thursday are expected to return to work Monday. The work is being done by the James L. Stuart Company.

The workmen went on strike over installation of a stoker. The iron workers claim they should set it up, as it is an iron job, while the steamfitters believe the work belongs to them.

THIEF TAKES $5; GIVES $1 BACK

Mrs. James Day, 25, of 510 Beaver street, Leetsdale, held up by a well-dressed bandit in the Leetsdale playground, Ferry street, yesterday afternoon, said:

"That is all the money I have."

To this the robber answered:

"All right then, take your pocketbook back, and here is a dollar for you."

He leisurely walked away, pocketing five one-dollar bills which he had taken from Mrs. Day.

After threatening to shoot her if she made an outcry, the stick-up man drove away in his automobile parked a short distance from the playground. Chief of Police A. W. Noland was notified.

LIQUOR, STILL SEIZED, 3 HELD

Large quantities of moonshine and a still were seized by prohibition agents in four raids yesterday.

Charles Sicilia, 46, of 5164 Keystone street, was released on his own recognizance after a 25-gallon still was found in his home, according to the agents.

Confiscation of moonshine was reported in saloons at 3151 McClure avenue, and at 3044 Preble avenue. Mike Verlihay, 43, arrested at the latter place, was held in bond, it was reported.

In the home of Fred Wulframp, 47, at 1140 Steuben street, moonshine and alcohol was seized, agents said. Wulframp was arrested.

Hearst Sees Europe Headed for New War

You know that one of our main objects for going into the war was to end the evil of secret diplomacy which had been the cause of so many wars.

You know that the treaty which we secured and revealed was not "an open covenant openly arrived at" but a secret treaty negotiated behind closed doors.

You know that it was a treaty to increase armaments and to make war alliances while at that very moment the United States, the saviour of the Allies, was trying to make agreements to reduce armaments and promote peace.

We secured and published the secret treaty, not only to inform you of its contents, but to inform you more fully of the insincerity, the treachery, the perfidy of the nations of Europe towards each other and toward us.

France is angry at me because I had told the truth about her duplicity and chicanery.

And the further truth is that all Europe today in the same old way is headed headlong for another and greater war.

Every day France is strengthening her military strangle-hold upon other nations of Europe and every day the nations which France is strangling are being driven toward Bolshevism, and into the arms of Russia.

There is no democracy, no liberty in Europe such as we in America know.

Here liberty is a part of the very structure of our bodies, of the very essence of our souls; but among the nations of Europe it is a garment to be put on or off, as expediency dictates.

A European nation may have Despotism one year, Bolshevism the next year and still there would be no liberty in the Despotism, no liberty in the Bolshevism and no liberty in the Republicanism.

Peace in Europe can only be secured upon the same principles on which it is maintained in the United States, upon the American ideal of liberty and the American ideal of self-determination.

Let the people of Europe themselves decide under what government they want to live and in what nation they want to enroll; with what other people they think they can consort in happiness and harmony.

Yet for any man to preach that simple Christian doctrine of the brotherhood of man would bring down upon his head the anathema of every state in Europe and expulsion from every country in Europe.

There can be no peace in Europe until Europe shall build her house upon the rocks of liberty and democracy, equality and humanity.

But Europe has built her house upon the sands of bitterness and hatred, oppression and persecution, injustice and tyranny.

And when the winds shall blow and the rain shall descend, the house will fall and great will be the fall thereof.

Let us in America not be mixed up in European affairs, lest the house fall upon us.

Let us help the nations of Europe in all good will and with the illuminating evidence of our example, but let us not be involved in their wreck and ruin which their madness and blindness shall surely bring upon them.

The French made a portrait of Liberty and sent it to adorn New York Harbor, but they did not even know what Liberty looked like.

They made the rays around her head of bayonets; they made the light in her uplifted arm a club to beat down freedom or else a torch to light the fires of anarchy.

They wrote upon the tablet in her hand a hymn of hate.

They made her feet of bronze but her heel of iron to plant upon the neck of prostrate peoples.

Old Timers Make Merry As Homestead Fete Ends

Several score of the more than 1,000 old timers who attended the Golden Jubilee in Homestead remained in the borough today to continue their vists with friends, although the celebration was brought to a close last night.

The five-day fete ended with five public balls, at which hundreds of couples danced until a late hour last night. Old-time residents were guests of honor at the parties held in the Elks' Temple, Turner Hall and Russian Hall, while Negro couples were guests at the Community House and Sokol Hall. Several private dances, held in honor of former townsmen now residing far from the borough, were held in Homestead homes.

Several thousand persons participated in the parade held yesterday afternoon when the marchers were divided into seven divisions, interspersed by a score of bands. Fifty floats and many gaily decorated automobiles helped to make the procession the largest ever held in the Monongahela Valley, Homestead officials said.

A drizzling rain failed to stop either the progress of the parade, which marched over the principal streets of Homestead, West Homestead, Munhall and return, or the thousands who determined to witness the spectacle. Maj. J. Clyde Miller was chief marshal of the parade.

M'KEES ROCKS CHURCH TO DEDICATE NEW BUILDING

SUNDAY RITES MARK DOUBLE ANNIVERSARY

Bishop Boyle to Officiate At Ceremony, Assisted by Noted Priests of District

A double anniversary and a dedication ceremony will mark the services tomorrow in St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church, Church avenue, McKees Rocks. The new convent, recently completed, will be formally dedicated at the afternoon service, at which Bishop Hugh C. Boyle, of the Pittsburgh Catholic Diocese, will officiate. The Rev. Paul E. Campbell will deliver the dedication sermon.

At the morning service, the seventy-fifth anniversary of the founding of the first St. Mary's Church in Chartiers City, now McKees Rocks, will be celebrated. The service will also mark the twenty-fifth anniversary of the present St. Mary's Church. At this service Bishop Boyle will celebrate a solemn pontificial high mass, in which he will be assisted by a number of priests, including the Very Rev. S. J. Schramm, the Rev. Edward O. Zauner, the Rev. Louis P. Yunker, the Rev. A. C. Adler, the Rev. Norbert J. Schramm, the Very Rev. John A. Greiner, the Rev. George A. Baumer and the Very Rev. Sigmund Cratz.

The Rev. Dr. Leo L. Meyer is the pastor of St. Mary's and the Rev. George A. Baumer is assistant pastor.

NEW CONVENT TO BE DEDICATED

URGES CHURCH BACK DRY LAW

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—(AP.)—A plea to rally to the enforcement of prohibition was made by James R. Crain, of Indianapolis, before the board of temperance and social welfare of the Disciples of Christ.

Formal declaration on prohibition by the international convention of Disciples, in session here, still awaited committee action. Resolutions drawn up have been referred to a subcommittee for revision but it is understood that a strong demand for redoubled enforcement efforts was heartily approved.

Crain, one of two secretaries of the board, asserted that "no substitute (for prohibition) has been proposed which does not provide a liquor system, and propose control of the government by liquor rather than control of liquor by the government."

Predicting that "for the next five years at least, the bitterest battle yet is before us," the secretary linked prohibition violations with "lawlessness that is a shame" with municipal scandal and racketeering, all of which he insisted are "the church's problems."

Challenging the sincerity of modificationists, Crain called upon them to "join us in securing enforcement, instead of joining with criminals, against it."

The convention nominally recessed late in the day in order to permit convening of a session of the United Christian Missionary Society, which elected Dr. Stephen J. Corey, of Indianapolis, president; I. J. Cahill, of Cleveland, first vice president, and Miss Mary Campbell, of Indianapolis, second vice president.

'Treasures' Subject At Lorenz Church

"The Christian's Treasures" will be discussed tomorrow morning in the Lorenz Avenue Evangelical Church, Lorenz avenue and Crucible street, by the Rev. E. A. Miles. In the evening he will preach on "God's Will for Man."

SIEBERT HOST TO WORKERS

More than 100 volunteer workers who assist the staff of the Lutheran Inner Mission Society were guests of William P. Siebert, president of the board of managers, at a dinner Friday night in the First Lutheran Church, Grant street. These volunteer workers assist the institutional pastor, the Rev. A. W. Stremel, in his visitations at Mayview and Woodville homes, as well as the hospitals of Pittsburgh.

Mr. Siebert

Mr. Siebert annually invites the volunteer workers as his guests and the dinner is given in their honor. Special guests at the banquet included Dr. Walter E. Schuette, president of the eastern district of the American Lutheran Church; the Rev. H. H. Bagger, president of the Pittsburgh Synod; the Rev. Dr. A. J. Holl, of the First Lutheran Church, Grant street; Warden John McNeil, of the Allegheny County Jail, and Attorney John E. Winner. The toastmaster was the Rev. S. C. Michelfelder, superintendent of the Lutheran Inner Mission Society.

BRETHREN PLAN DEDICATION

The New Henderson Memorial United Brethren Church, of Trafford, will be dedicated October 26 at a service at which the pastor, the Rev. L. T. Culp, will officiate.

Dr. W. S. Wilson, of Johnstown, superintendent of the Allegheny Conference of the United Brethren Church, will deliver the dedicatory address.

CHURCH, POOR, SCHOOLS GET BEQUESTS

Woman Wills $5,000 Each To Several Pittsburgh Charities, Congregation

Bequests of $5,000 each to the Pittsburgh Association for the Improvement of the Poor and the St. Barnabas Free Home and $3,000 as a scholarship fund at the school at Buckhorn, Ky., or some other school for mountaineers, were left under the will of Elizabeth L. Dickey, of Herron Hill, disposing of an estate worth $90,000. The residue is left to the session of the Third Presbyterian Church as a fund for work among the mountaineers.

The will made these bequests: Louise Robinson, niece, $15,000; Daniel D. Dickey, $5,000; William W. Matson, $2,000; Elizabeth Goldsborough, Hamilton Herron and H. G. Tinker, $1,000 each; eight nephews and nieces $2,000 each, and six grandnieces and grandnephews $1,000 each.

The estate of Mrs. Bessie B. Kerr, widow of John H. Kerr, of 601 Clyde street, valued at $45,000, was left to a daughter, Jane Mercer Kerr. The will stated that Mrs. Kerr was not unmindful of her son, Attorney Allan H. Kerr, whom she held in equal affection, but her daughter was named sole beneficiary because of sacrifices for her parents.

ARMY CRUSADE BRINGS $61,200

Although the Salvation Army home service fund appeal failed to reach its objective of $112,900, it has set a new mark in the total number of contributors. The active campaign closed Saturday with a total of $61,260 reported.

Army officials expressed gratification at the increase in the number of contributors. It proves that the work of the army has the confidence of the people, declared Lieut. Col. Charles B. Campbell, head of the local organization. The army will carry on, he said, remarking that all additional contributions will be appreciated.

Communion Service At St. Mark's Church

The Rev. Dr. Frederick Kempster, of St. Mark's Episcopal Church, Grape and Bausman avenues, will conduct communion services at 8 o'clock tomorrow morning. At the regular 11 o'clock service he will preach on "Work of the Church." At the evening service his subject will be "Indispensable Qualifications."

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Players of Sewickley Cot Club to Be Guests at Supper After Show

For many years Mrs. George Phelps Rose, now honorary president of the Sewickley Cot Club, gave a footlight supper for the Sewickley Cot Club players after their annual benefit performance.

This year Mrs. James Todd, the president, will entertain the members of the caste with a supper Tuesday evening in the Penguin tearoom, Sewickley, after the show is over. Next year the cot club will give its twenty-fifth annual play.

Mrs. J. Reuben Rose and Harry Colby are taking the place of Mrs. William Booth and Putnam Goldsbury, both originally members of the casts.

Social Events

Mrs. Henry R. Rea will give a buffet luncheon tomorrow in the Allegheny Country Club, which will be one of the most interesting events of the week-end.

Dominating all news of today and tomorrow, however, are the weddings of Margaret Jarvis, daughter of the William Rice Jarvises, of South Graham street, and Frederick Redfield Weed, of Boston, which will take place at 5:30 o'clock this afternoon in the Calvary Episcopal Church, and of Sara Westwood Lewis, daughter of the Bertrand W. Lewises, of South Pacific avenue, and James Scott Miller, of Wheaton, Ill., which will take place this evening at 7:30 o'clock in Christ Methodist Episcopal Church.

Eastern Wedding

News comes from Philadelphia of the wedding yesterday of Helen Willey, daughter of the Guy Allen Willeys, of Kanawha, Haverford, and Frank L. Sullivan, son of the J. Alfred Millers, of Aylesboro avenue. The marriage took place in All Saints' Church, Wynnewood, Philadelphia, with the Rev. Dr. Gibson Bell, rector, officiating.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of ivory satin with long sleeves. The long court train was draped from the shoulders, and her veil of tulle, caught with a cap of lace fastened with a band of pearls, fell over the satin train. She carried white orchids and lilies of the valley. Her maid of honor was Martha Machold, who wore copperglow satin with a flared skirt, in petal effect, lined with yellow satin, having a brief train. Her hat was of golden brown velvet and moire, and she carried yellow cactus dahlias and autumn leaves.

Autumn Colors

The bridesmaids all wore gowns of yellow satin made like those of the maid of honor, with the petaled skirts lined with copperglow satin, and their hats were of velvet and moire in the same shade, and they carried dahlias and autumn leaves. The bridesmaids included Elizabeth Smith, of Charleston, W. Va.; Mary Wain Willey, of Baltimore, Md., a cousin of the bride; Luisa Sullivan, of Pittsburgh, sister of the bridegroom, and Mrs. Edward C. Dearden, Jr., of Philadelphia.

The bride's mother wore black lace with an Eton jacket edged with fur and a hat of black velvet. She carried lilies of the valley.

John Stewart, of New York, was the best man, and the ushers included Robert Euwer, Graham Jones and John Jones, all of New York, and W. Thomas Willey, brother of the bride, of Philadelphia.

There was a small reception in the Willey home after the ceremony. The Sullivans will make their home in Pelham, N. Y., when they return from their honeymoon November 1.

The bride attended the Warrenton Country School in Warrenton, Va., and Miss Wright's School in Bryn Mawr, Pa., and Mr. Sullivan was graduated from Princeton.

Turkeys Reported Cheapest Since '98

CHICAGO, Oct. 18.—(AP.)—The economic depression has not affected the consumption of turkeys. C. E. McNeill, business manager of the Chicago Poultry Association, yesterday said a dollar would buy more turkey this year than at any time since 1898. The fowl are more plentiful, McNeill said. Housewives can buy year-old turkeys on the Chicago market at 18 cents a pound—four cents a pound cheaper than last year. Spring-hatched fowl are two cents a pound cheaper. Geese, chicken and ducks are correspondingly cheaper.

O'Brien Back from Probation Meeting

George G. O'Brien, probation officer for the Federal District Court, last night returned from the conference of federal probation supervisors at Louisville, Ky. It was attended by 54 government probation officers from 22 states.

O'Brien was appointed chairman of the committee on public relations, on which work he delivered an address.

Pittsburgh Woman And Son go Abroad

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—Mrs. George V. Fish and son, George V. Fish, Jr., of Pittsburgh, left for a two months' visit abroad, sailing on the Lancastria, bound for Plymouth, Havre and London. They will spend a week in England and proceed to the continent.

Psychology In Nurseries

Do You Think:

That the child playing in a nursery made gay with painted furniture and appointments might be happier than the child in a room drab in its color? Will the former be the more tractable of the two? If he is, then will he prove himself more receptive to the modern training now exacted of the child.

But any child would love the little "toy house" chair, an innovation to be seen next Wednesday afternoon in the Schenley Hotel at the Tea and Exhibit of the Industrial League and Handcraft Guild.

The mother will appreciate seeing the clothes rack with its 25 coat hangers to be set up when she entertains.

Everything in these shops is made by the needy, who receive all the proceeds.

A bit out of the beaten path of club programs was the meeting held yesterday by the Sheraden Woman's Club. Many of the members brought old quilts, coverlets and samplers and, as these were placed on exhibition, told the stories connected with their history. Mrs. J. G. Taylor had charge of the quilts and Mrs. S. P. Faull of the samplers and mottoes. Mrs. Frank L. Rex, accompanied by Mrs. John P. Clark, sang.

A bridge tea will be held Thursday afternoon at the Bnai Israel social hall by the newly organized Junior Bnai Israel Sisterhood. Mrs. Samuel Zuckerman, Mrs. Paul Trellis and Mrs. N. Rudick will be hostesses for the meeting. Mrs. Zuckerman is president of the organization; Mrs. Emanuel Ackerman, vice president; Mrs. H. L. Kaplan, secretary; Mrs. I. F. Miller, treasurer, and Mrs. Paul Feldman, publicity chairman. Mrs. Barnett Davis, president of the Senior Sisterhood, has been made an honorary member.

Rescuer of Boy Gets King's Medal

LONDON, Oct. 18.—(AP.)—King George has conferred the Albert Medal for "Gallantry in Saving Life"—the civilian equivalent of the prized Victoria Cross—on Robert Murray Kavanaugh, 22, of Darlinghurst, New South Wales.

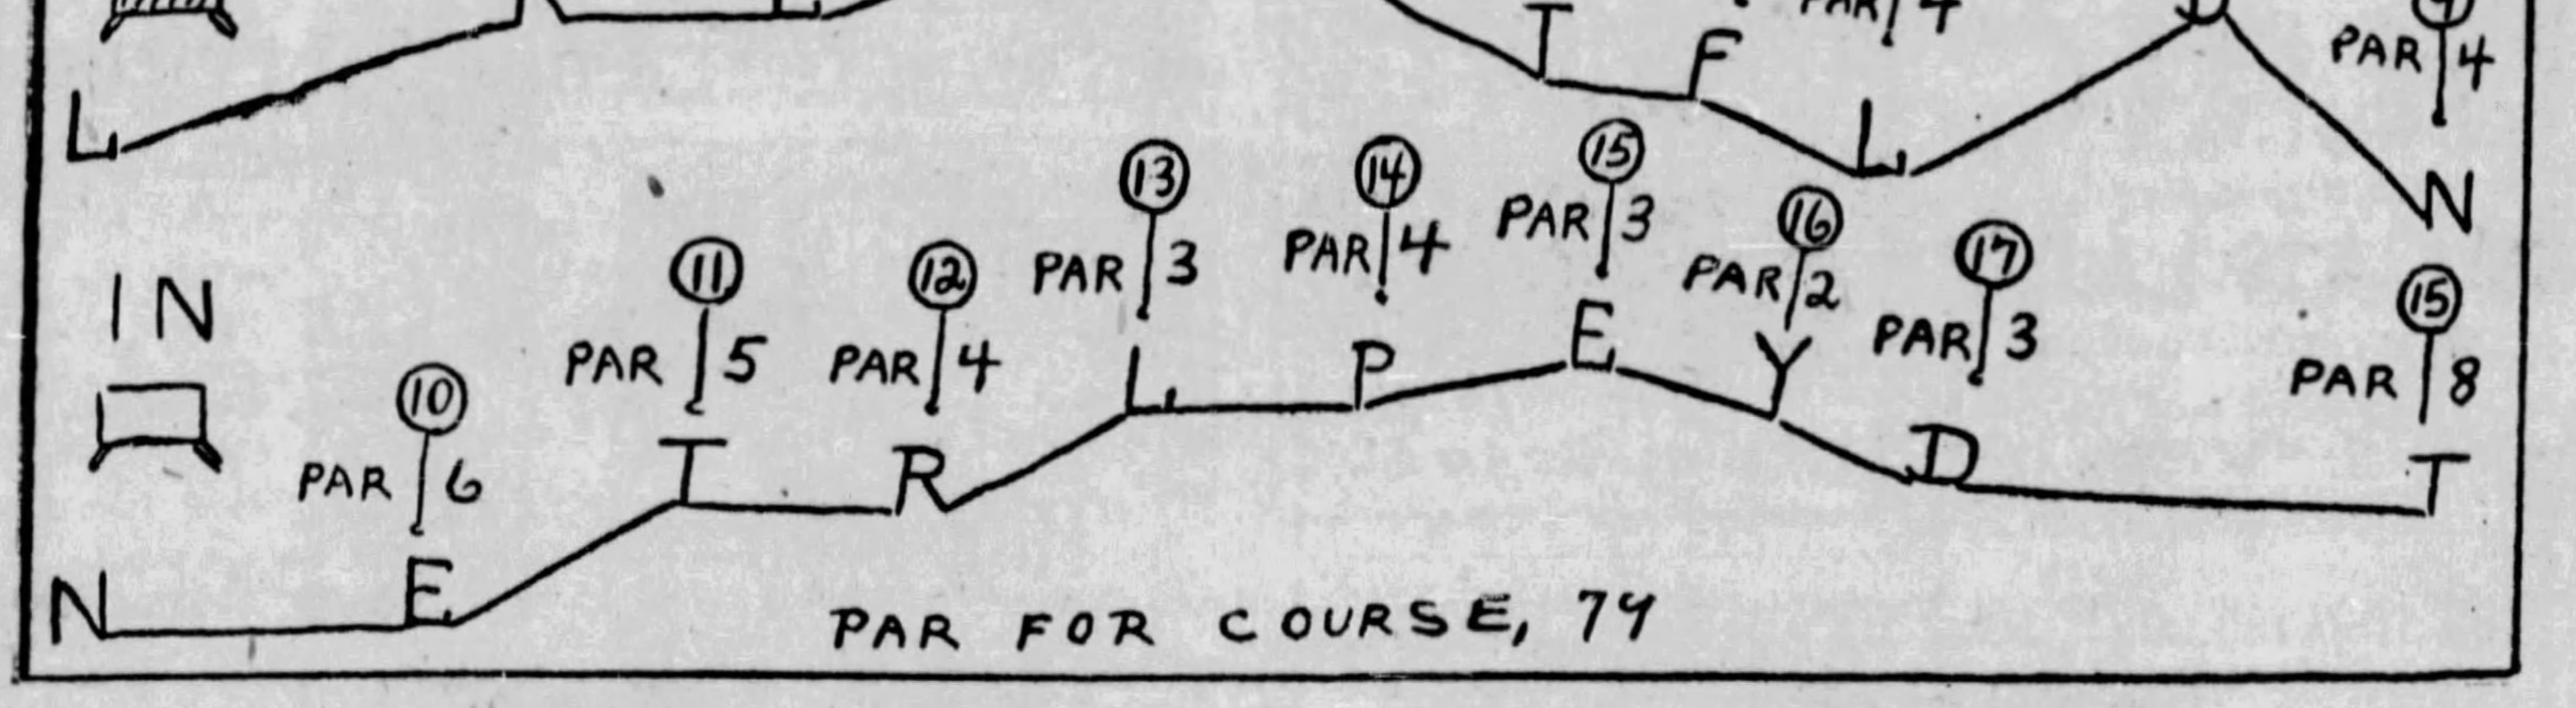
At Bonds Beach he saw a boy swimmer being attacked by a man-eating shark about 50 yards from shore. Kavanaugh, unmindful of personal safety, swam to the spot and dragged the boy ashore. The lad died.

Dedication of High School Tomorrow

OIL CITY, Pa., Oct. 18.—Plans have been perfected for dedication Sunday of the new $100,000 St. Joseph's High School. Many priests from churches of the diocese will attend.

The school is a gift of Henry McSweeney, of Atlantic City, who gave $100,000 in memory of his father and mother, John and Elizabeth McSweeney. The two-story building has a large auditorium with a pipe organ.

PENCIL GOLF



RULES

Proper nouns, slang and words that offend good taste cannot be used. SCORING: The first and last letters of each word do not count as strokes. A longer or shorter word can be substituted, but at a penalty. If a longer word is used, each letter above par counts as a stroke; if a shorter word is used, each letter below par counts as a stroke. If player cannot insert a suitable word, add 3 strokes to par for hole and proceed to next hole.

The solution to this puzzle can be found on page 9.

CLUES

1—One who owns land.
2—A tricking, dishonest fellow.
3—Pertaining to letters or learning.
4—Three feet.
5—Not used.
6—A person who steals.
7—Pertaining to the face.
8—Owner of land or houses.
9—What one has dominion over.
10—To number.
11—To pray for.
12—To mix in due proportion.
13—Enjoying the favor of the sovereign.
14—A place for confining persons.
15—A temporary stop.
17—To submit.

Literature Unit Gives Luncheon

The literature department of the Congress of Clubs continues to grow and yesterday found a larger number than ever before gathered for the department's monthly luncheon in the clubhouse. Mrs. May T. Neff, chairman, had provided numerous attractions, chief of which was a splendid talk by Miss Susanne Beatty on internationalism, only she chose to speak of it as universality.

She showed how peoples of all the world are linked together in universality of thought and action—in their quest for peace, in their recognition of women and in other paths. She spoke, too, of the prohibition question and emphasized the necessity of thinking, not narrowly and in an insular way, but in terms of the world. Miss Beatty termed the Passion Play a great, tremendous, beautiful example of internationalism in concrete form.

Elinor Cowan Stone, the author, was guest of honor and was introduced by Mrs. Neff. May Banker, a student at Langley High School, gave a vivid and youthful picture of the who, what, when, where and why of the Langley school paper, which is an extracurricular activity. Mrs. Katherine Riggs read a story by Mrs. Katherine Buck. Nellie Risher Roberts contributed piano numbers and there were book reviews by several of the members, including one of "Mary Gladstone's Diary and Letters" by Mrs. Dulce Fiske Fairman and one of Don Blanding's "Vagabond House," by Mrs. Carl E. Coslowsky, who surprised her friends with her ability as a "reader."

DESIGNERS PRESENT LATEST CREATIONS IN BLACK COATS

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Oct. 18.—Smart women everywhere are wrapped up in their new black coats. For black coats are covering more sartorial territory than ever this season, and all fear of uniformity or duplication is removed by the variety of models already available. Materials are so many and new, designs are so clever and furs are so originally handled that the coat of black with black or white trimming assumes a new significance. Smooth broadcloths, alluring woolens rough or wondrously soft, cleverly simulated broadtail, are some of the fabrics that are helping to make the chill winds of autumn more bearable, and perhaps even welcome, when one has a deft and most flattering new black coat that is just waiting to make its debut. Buy a good black coat and you will find that it will be awfully good to you.

TWO OF THE NEWEST of new smart coats have been especially sketched for you. The first is a model by Bernard et Cie, and it shows how very attractive a simulated fur material can be. The coat is of excellent imitation broadtail and is cut on coat dress lines, which means that it is snug-fitting. If the fur is simulated, ample compensation is offered in the form of a real ermine cravat, deftly tied at the side. The coat is ornamented with silver buttons. The muff is of ermine.

TO BOOST the charms of the black coat, we have chosen to show you a sketch of a new Bruyere model. It is fashioned of black "Grania" which is a rough-faced material by Rodler that is much in demand this season. The sleeves of the coat are decidedly interesting and lend a most decorative note. The cravat collar is of black broadtail and the belt which marks a rather high waist is of black suede with a large and imposing silver buckle. A most useful all-day coat, because it is decorative without losing it's distinguished simplicity.

And Now 'REALIFE' on the Screen

The greatest invention since the talking movie. The camera sees with YOUR eyes. Pictures seem to live and breathe. The nearest approach to third dimension in a moving picture.

See 'BILLY THE KID' as the GUEST OF THE SUN-TELEGRAPH

Sun-Telegraph Ad readers will be among the first in the world to be given the opportunity to see "BILLY THE KID" as guest of this paper.

Join in this contest to win GUEST TICKETS to see this marvelous and amazing forward step in the development of Talking Pictures. "BILLY THE KID" has never been filmed before, due to the limitations of former production methods. But now it has been made—thanks to "REALIFE"—and it is coming to LOEW'S ALDINE, Friday, October 24

HOW TO WIN SUN-TELEGRAPH GUEST TICKETS TO THE ALDINE THEATER

The synopsis of "BILLY THE KID" is published in the Classified Ads—five sentences each day. The first five appeared yesterday. Five more are published today. The next five will be published tomorrow, and so on until the total of thirty-five have appered. Collect the sentences as they appear each day and when you have the thirty-five, copy them in your own handwriting, being as neat as possible and using only one side of the paper. The fifty persons submitting the neatest, most accurate manuscript of the synopsis will each be given TWO GUEST TICKETS to see "Billy the Kid" at the Aldine Theater. If you did not start the contest yesterday, hunt up yesterday's Sun-Telegraph and find the first five sentences, then look for the ones published today and keep a sharp look out for the rest as they appear. When you have your manuscript completed, mail it to the "Realife" Editor, Classified Ad Dept., Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph. Contest closes Friday, Oct. 24, at midnight. Winners will be announced as soon as possible after this date. In case of a tie duplicate awards will be given. Don't delay—start today.

By the way, the hidden sentences are not the only things of interest in the Classified Ads. Reading the Classified Ads every day is a great way to locate bargains—in apartments, houses, real estate, used cars, used furniture and other household articles, find a position, hire a maid, etc. Always look through the Classified Ads.

Walker Refuses Boys Recital Permit

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—(AP.)—A proposed concert by Ruggieri Ricci, 12-year-old violin prodigy and his 8-year-old brother, Giorgio, was called off last night, after Mayor Walker refused to sign a permit necessary for such appearances by children.

The mayor acted on objections by an attorney for the boys' parents, who seek to take the children from the custody of their guardian, Miss Elizabeth Lackey.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal.
Oct. 18.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

Just passed by one of our fine country clubs out here, and there was a big crowd. It was the women's golf championship of America. We used to think going to see women play golf would be like going to see men crochet, but say, there is nothing effeminate about this golf thing as played by these champion women. Say, what a bunch of channel swimmers they are. I would hate to beat one of them to a parking space. They just lay that innocent little ball down, grit their teeth, and swing like a woodchopper, and it takes one of our modern men in mighty good physical condition to even walk where it goes to. Miniature golf might be all right for men, but not for this humorously called weaker six. Yours,

WILL.

Jolson's Race Horse Wins But Al Has His Money On Another One

By HARRISON CARROLL
(Copyright, 1930, Premier Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 18.

A race-horse has honor save in his own stables, if I may paraphrase a bit.

Al Jolson, just returned here from the East, tells a story of how one of his nags rebuked him for lack of faith.

The singing comedian owns two ponies, Concord and Kildaire, which he purchased a month ago. The former, a two-year-old, was a 10-to-1 shot at Jamaica last week. Al, thinking his horse had no chance, bet on another entry.

Concord won.

Ann Harding

Incidentally, Al plans to ship his two horses out here for the winter races at Agua Caliente.

The comedian's picture, "Sons o' Guns," has been delayed again. At this writing, no one is prepared to say when it will be made.

PRACTICAL ADVICE

Pathe location scouts went to Lake Tahoe in search of backgrounds for a new Ann Harding picture. While there, they met Will Rogers.

"What are you doing here?" asked Rogers.

"We are looking for a location," they confessed.

"What kind of a location?"

"A trout stream."

"Why don't you follow Herbert Hoover?" advised Rogers.

O'BRIEN ILL

Dan O'Brien, former chief of San Francisco police, has been seriously ill at the home of his son, George, in the Malibu film colony. He has had a touch of pneumonia, with other complications. As a result of his illness, he has resigned his position on the San Francisco police commission. For the past year the popular official has been managing George's motion picture affairs. He was instrumental in the signing of the star's new contract with Fox.

HEAVY RESPONSIBILITY

The responsibility of stardom is heavy. One false move and many fans may be alienated.

It is told that Maurice Chevalier felt grave concern over the effect of a line in the dialogue of "Play Boy of Paris." The line read:

"I don't know what it is about me, but, of course, she would fall for me—all women do."

Maurice Chevalier.

Chevalier worried for two weeks over this line. He argued that the public might take it as coming from him instead of the character. Finally he won out, and the line was deleted.

Fulton, Sheridan Feature "Her Man"

"Her Man," heralded as a picture of hectic romance, pleasure and regeneration, featuring Helen Twelvetrees, Philips Holmes, Marjorie Rambeau and Ricardo Cortez, is the current attraction on the screens of the Fulton, downtown, and the Sheridan Square, East End. Paramount sound news, Knute Rockne, in football illustrations, and Eddie Cantor in "Insurance" are additional Fulton films. There also are supplemental attractions in the Sheridan Square. A review of "Her Man" will appear Monday.

Husband Threatened Life, Wife Testifies

Mrs. Dorothy F. Shea, of Fordham avenue, Brookline, told of alleged death threats by her husband, Joseph G. Shea, at the hearing of her divorce suit by Judge Harry H. Rowand in Common Pleas Court. She said he threatened to throw acid on her face and poison her, and once he put baking soda in her coffee which she thought was poison.

They were married September 15, 1928, at Wellsburg, W. Va., and parted in October, 1929.

ENRIGHT PICTURES KILLING IN PARK

By BARBARA WILBERT

"Sinners Holiday," in the Enright, takes you to the Amusement Park and there you stay during the entire picture. Many unexpected things happen. In the park there is a gang of bootleggers; a murder is committed; a sister condemns her own brother to justify the man she loves. The great strength and weakness of mother-love is portrayed very forcibly by Lucille La Verne. Grant Withers and Evelyn Knapp have a very sweet, but amusing love affair. When love comes along Jennie (Miss Knapp) decides that it is more than "a lot of hooey" as she had always supposed, but is something big and wonderful. As we leave them, they are still in the Amusement Park, selling tickets, for "the show must go on."

Dick Powell makes the audience happy by telling them of his new contract to remain six months longer; then he makes them glad again by his presentation, "Melody Lane." Paul Mall gives us the whole story in a medley. Laura and Leona amaze us with their adagio dancing, Geraldine charms us with her clever intricacies, but the little black boys, "Midnite and Daybreak," take down the house. The orchestra's melodies are well chosen and well executed. To make the show complete, Dick sings, the girls dance and Milton Slosser presides at the organ.

CLARA BOW'S WEDDING LEADS TO MIX-UPS IN FUNNY FARCE

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Clara Bow romps through "Her Wedding Night" in every sort of dress and undress at the Penn Theater in a screen comedy made from one of Avery Hopwood's old bedroom farces. There is a composer whose love songs have brought hundreds of hearts to surrender—until in despair he tries to escape the women by letting a friend impersonate him. The friend gets married by proxy, and Clara Bow is the bride.

George Seibel.

When the proxy husband brings home the proxy bride, the fun begins. Other loved ones arrive on the scene, smash the china and pottery, and everybody gets into the wrong bed, and it's a merry chase till everything gets straightened out.

THE CENSOR NODS

Just what the censor was thinking of when he passed "Her Wedding Night" is not clear. Perhaps he was nodding—perhaps he was looking through his book of ridiculous rules.

Not that the picture is particularly naughty, but aren't the pictures supposed to be particularly pure?

"Her Wedding Night" has the redeeming virtue of being really funny at times, especially when Skeets Gallagher is performing. And Clara Bow in all her many changes of dress and undress is as agile as ever, crawling into bed and under the bed, popping through doors on this side and on that—a merry chase with many hurdles.

NAVY SEES THE WORLD

In the stage show the Runaway Four join the navy and see the world through a porthole. What they see is well worth seeing, for the Chester Hale Girls gone Oriental do their best to make the cruise tropical and interesting.

Then there is a South American baritone, Tito Corral, who looks too romantic to be in captivity and sings well enough to set the Pampas on fire.

And the Runaway Four indulge in such comical antics, Wild Oscar has some new sentimental ballads, and David Pesetzki's orchestra plays a medley of Neapolitan songs, so Ray Teal as master of ceremonies has little to do but applaud the show.

Three Hurt in Crash Sue Clairton Man

Suits against Isaac N. Nicholas, of Clairton, claiming an aggregate of $125,000 damages for personal injuries in an automobile collision, were filed in Common Pleas Court by Margaret R. Lofink, of Carrick, asking $50,000, and Mrs. Elizabeth Bickerton and her son, Thomas W. Bickerton, of Carrick, asking $75,000.

They were passengers in an automobile owned by John Grimm which was struck by an automobile owned by Nicholas on Saw Mill Run boulevard at Bausman street September 2, the suit alleged.

Wife Hurled Vase, Divorce Suit Charge

Frank Burke, of Leolyn street, Carrick, testified at the hearing of his divorce suit that he was the target for household articles, including a vase, hurled at him by his wife, Dorothy Burke, because he complained that she visited her mother too much and neglected her household duties. He said he finally left their Alice street, Knoxville, home, August 16, 1929, when his wife chased him with a butcher knife.

Hungry Club Will Hear C. A. Thompson

"What Shall We Do About Latin-American Revolutions" will be the subject of Charles A. Thompson, secretary of the Fellowship of Reconciliation, next Monday noon in the Fort Pitt Hotel at the luncheon of the Hungry Club.

Camera Question Box

The Sun-Telegraph's "Camera Question Box" each day will ask a question of public interest to Pittsburghers, and will photograph those interviewed.

Today's question: Mr. G. K. Chesterton says, "Women find no real freedom in business. Instead, they are tied down and enslaved far more than they ever were before." Do you agree with him?

Mr. Benthin

FRED BENTHIN, North Side, student, Allegheny—Yes, I agree with Mr. Chesterton. Women have no real freedom in business. A woman's place is in the home; there she has all the freedom that she should have.

Mr. Beatty

Miss Frank

MISS BETTY FRANK, North Side—Whether a woman be in business or in the home, there are conditions that alter cases. As a general rule, though, I do not agree with Mr. Chesterton. I think a woman is tied down more in the home, especially if she has a family.

Mrs. Farrell

MRS. W. T. FARRELL, North Side, housewife—No, I do not agree with him entirely. I would say that one condition is about the same as the other; whether a woman is in business or in the home, she is not free.

Miss Katsur

MISS ANNA KATSUR, city, stenographer—I regret that I cannot agree with Mr. Chesterton in this statement. Women have much more freedom in business than they have ever had or ever will have in the home.

Miss Katella

MISS MILDRED KATELLA, city, student, Pitt—A woman who is in business is not only free to follow her own judgment after working hours, but she is also financially independent. When I consider these things, I am forced to disagree with Mr. Chesterton.

Logic

You have come back with all your old allure,
And once again my nights are filled with you;
I felt the months had wrought a certain cure,
But now I know my thoughts were far from true.
I am still slave to each enchanting way,
I am still bound by slim and silken chains,
There are so many things I still must say,
There is so much of love that still remains.

Well do I know that you will not be true,
Well do I know how quickly glamour dies;
Yet there are hours that I must spend with you
Probing the secrets in your laughing eyes;
If, at the end, these secrets still remain—
Surely, my dear, the search is worth the pain!

—Man About Town.

Add Practical Jokes

The United Press, according to the N. Y. Herald-Tribune, quotes Miss Barrymore as "emphatically denying" that she called the newspaper profession "the lowest."

"Why should I fear the New York critics?" Ethel is also supposed to have said. "I suppose few persons have received more generous and gracious treatment at their hands than I have."

The Sunday World files of only a few months ago could reveal why Miss Barrymore "fears the critics"—unless, of course, the Sunday World and its interviewer played Ethel a Dirty Trick.

And didn't the Sunday World, after some doubt was expressed that she said the things she was quoted as saying, get another statement from her in which she reiterated here tongue lashing?

Heheheh

Elinson was saying that those cardboard phonographs that they're peddling for 15 cents are a great thing, considering the fun you get in buying a copy of the "Stein Song" every now and then, just to tear it up!

Gosh, Yes!

"Dear Mr. Winchell," writes Beatrice Gumbinner. "Sunday night during the Heywood Broun refereed spelling bee you missed up badly on 'tabloid' when you spelled it 'tablurd.' A little quick thinking on your park and you would have spelled it 'tab-lurid'."

Gag

Take it from Bob K. London, the booking agent, an actor who for nearly five years, without any encouragement, finally barked:

"Listen here, now! Can you book me or not?"

Mr. London shook his head in the No manner.

"Well, then," said the disgusted fellow, "give me back my name and address!"

Repartee

Then there is Leo Townsend's report of this eavesdropped chatter:

Just for the Records

The column's incessant argument that "Gina Malo" (who succeeded Lily Damita in "Sons o' Guns") was a colleen named Janet Flynn, enticed an abundance of abuse. No less than 20 letters came from persons who "could vow" that Miss Malo was a Frenchy "because I was raised with her in France," etc.

Recently Janet Flynn, who was forced to masquerade as a Mam'selle, revolted when the show played Cincinnati, her home town.

"I'm warning all of you," she declared, "in Cincy I'm letting my hair down, see? I co-operated the best I could with the management in New York, but I'll be damned if I make a fool out of myself before the kids I went to school with here."

Wurra, Wurra.

Hic!

Clipped from America, a tome written 30 years ago by Joel Cook:

"The scene of this great carousal is said to have been the island where is now the City of New York. The Indian word Man-a-tey means 'the island,' and from this they named the place Man-a-hat-ta-nink, 'the island of intoxication' later it was changed to Manhattan, 'the place where they all got drunk.'"

You shaid it, bwoy!

There, Now!

"Now, now, Walter, don't you let that horrid old Hark Hellinger make you cry with his taunts of how pale you are," affectionately writes "Duke" Ridgeley, of Huntington, W. Va., and the Pennsylvania Hotel, N. Y. "There is only one thing about Mark I like better than you, Walter, and that's Gladys Glad!"

THE TRAINS SPEED BY ON SOUND SCREEN IN THE WARNER

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

"Danger Lights," railroad melodrama, is in the Warner. It has Louis Wolheim in the leading role. He is seen as a fellow whose religion and life is "railroading."

The film is the story of two men and the girl that one of them gets at the finale.

Freight train comes rumbling by and sends a startled heroine into a young man's arms. Which is the birth of romance.

COMES THE SUSPENSE

Limited comes tearing along and almost gets same young man whose foot happens to be caught in a switch. Which is a moment of suspense.

Wolheim comes walking along in time to save the young man. And he does, but he gets smashed up for his pains. Which is an episode of tragedy.

Special goes thundering toward Chicago at 100 miles an hour carrying the same Mr. Wolheim. If it makes Chicago in five hours it means Wolheim will live. And Leading Man Robert Armstrong is at the throttle to see that it does. Which is just like a movie.

MISSING DRAMA!

Mr. Wolheim is a keen actor. Mr. Armstrong is all right. As for Jean Arthur, the heroine, she is just Mr. and Mrs. Arthur's little girl.

"Danger Lights" makes a great play for the thrills. But as far as we're concerned, there's as much "kick" standing on a station platform watching the big locomotives go thundering by.

There is real drama in real railroading. Somehow, though, it has eluded this movie.

Heinroth Organ Recital Program

Dr. Charles Heinroth will give the following organ recital program this evening at 8:15 o'clock in the Carnegie Music Hall: Overture to "The Marriage of Figaro," Mozart; andante from "Grande Pierce Symphonique," Frank; "Sportive Fauns," D'Antalffy; organ concerto, No. 1 in G Minor, "Cuckoo and Nightingale," Handel; Carillon, De Lanster; "Mock Morris," Grainger; March of Homage, Wagner.

LAUGHS, MUSIC MIXED WITH GOLF ON ALDINE BILL

By MILDRED FILLMORE

Music on the golf links—that is "Love in the Rough," the new talkie in the Aldine. It is based on the stage play, "Spring Fever." Its story is about a shipping clerk whose prowess at golf gains him entre to an exclusive country club. There he beats all the aristocratic young fellows both on the links and in the ballroom. He wins the big tournament and the girl.

Robert Montgomery is the hero and Dorothy Jordon is the heroine. Quite a captivating little girl is Dorothy. They go into a number of songs these two—new songs, except some that have been heard over and over on the radio.

Comedy is present in the person of Benny Rubin. He's even goofier than he was when he appeared some years back on the Aldine stage. When they call "fore" in the film, he thinks it's an arithmetic lesson or something. And is he funny!

The picture is light, easy-to-take entertainment.

Short film subjects complete the bill.

LUCKY GIRL

Gordon Moore Testifies in Farnsworth Case

CHAPTER XLVIII.

The old Chinaman sat in his chair on the witness stand, and answered, patiently, and courteously the countless questions they flung at him.

"Did you, or did you not, know that there was gossip about Mrs. Catherine Farnsworth and her husband's business associate, Gordon Moore?"

"I knew that there was—gossip."

"How did you know it?"

"Have I not described the speeches of the son, Chester?"

"In your best judgment were these speeches true, or false?"

"False. I know they were false because of my own observation as a member of the household, and the spying of the maid-servant, Marguerite. If they were true Marguerite would have rejoiced, and it would have been known to me."

"Isn't it possible that she could have kept it from you."

Cheong cast a contemptuous look at his questioner. "No. I am acquainted with the ways of maid-servants. I could not be mistaken."

Master Was Ill

They told him to tell what he knew of his master's last day.

"The lady and Mr. Moore were having tea in the library," he said. "I myself brought the tea, and exchanged greetings with Mr. Moore. It was Mr. Moore's custom to join the lady and my master for tea frequently.

"On this day Mr. Farnsworth came home very ill. I helped him upstairs to his room. He did not go into the library, as was his custom, to join his good friend Mr. Moore and his lady. Instead he went directly to bed. He had been to a doctor and the doctor had told him that his days were numbered, he told me. I do not know the name of the white doctor who said so. No doubt the distinguished detectives can find his name.

"Mr. Farnsworth requested the maid, Marguerite, to tell her mistress that he would not join her at tea or dinner that night, and that he was not to be disturbed until morning, as he wished to sleep."

"What was the last time you saw your master alive?"

"When he came into the house, around seven o'clock."

"You did not go into his room, or worry about him later?"

"Certainly not. He asked not to be disturbed. I am accustomed to obeying his wishes."

"Did you accept the idea of his impending death—that is, did you think that he looked like a man who has not long to live?"

"No, sir. I had thought, at a more auspicious time, of recommending, perhaps, a Chinese doctor. I did not see death in his face."

That was all. They couldn't shake his testimony. The courtroom hummed. Reporters from the press table dashed out to telephones. Mary Paige pressed Cathie's hand.

"Gordon Moore!"

Cathie was afraid to look at him at first. "Now when they put Moore on the stand, don't look at him like a dying calf!" Mr. Allan had warned her.

Cathie had smiled rather tremulously. "Do I look at him that way?"

Gordon Testifies

Mr. Allan had laughed, "Oh, you know what I mean—love-light in your eyes, and so on. Now remember that he is your husband's friend, and that's ALL——"

"I'll be careful," Cathie had promised.

Well, she was being careful. Her eyes wandered over the courtroom. The Moores sat in a tight little group. The old uncle. The gaunt, weather-beaten brother. The blind aunt, silvery haired, dressed all in gray, her beautiful, sightless eyes gentle and sweet.

"How they must hate me. All of them," Cathie thought. "How they must wish that he'd loved that Mrs. Willoughby instead."

She stole a look at Gordon. How good he was to look at. Not handsome, really. Too thin and brown for that, too careworn now. But nice. Oh, so wonderfully nice. Strong, and true, and kind. Lean and muscular like Indians are supposed to be, and usually aren't . . . the kind of men girls dream of . . . And there he was . . . hers . . . going through all this for her . . . suffering for her . . .

Cathie pulled herself together, remembered what Mr. Allan warned her . . . Mustn't show what she felt . . . mustn't let her love shine out of her eyes . . .

She looked around the courtroom again. People didn't look inimical now. They looked friendly. That was Gordon's doing . . . he was making such a good impression. Explaining what had happened to him after he left her, making it all seem so matter of fact and natural . . . looking so open and honest . . . being so courteous and patient when Mr. Macmillan tried to make him contradict himself . . .

Gordon wasn't pretending that she was nothing to him. He was showing in every answer, in everything he said, that he cared for her. Once when he made what Mr. Macmillan thought was an evasive answer, and the district attorney bellowed something about him trying to protect the defendant, Gordon just looked at him and said in his clear, nice voice, "of course I'd protect her if I could. There's no one in the world I'd rather protect. But the girl doesn't need protection—all she needs is a chance to tell her own story—she's innocent!"

Cathie Happy

And that was out of order, and there was another squabble, but what of that? Cathie glowed with inner happiness. The still, beautiful look that had always been hers when she thought of Gordon settled over her again. Love . . . yes, that was what it was . . . no mistaking it. But Jesse Allan, seeing it out of the corner of his downcast eye, didn't worry. It wouldn't do the prosecution any good. It wasn't guilty love. It was love triumphant, love harassed, perhaps, but trusting, and hoping . . . love alive and lovely, in a miserable, dirty courtroom.

Fat men in the court room gaped at the slim loveliness of the girl in black, the girl with the look of a Madonna in her eyes, the defendant . . . When the district attorney said something ugly there were faint catcalls, boos from the back of the room, menacing shuffling of feet, whispers:

"They're all right!" . . . "Why don't he lay off them?" . . . The girl's innocent . . . ought to let her go . . ."

In his corner at the table Mr. Allan saw it, took it all in with his little, bright eyes that he kept partly hidden under lowered eyelids. His red face perspired, his sandy thatch of hair stood on end under his restless fingers. His pink bald spot shone. This was his day . . . his triumph . . .

A romantic housewife in the jury nudged the lady in the next chair. "Isn't it beautiful, his testimony," she wheezed.

Cathie heard. So did Mr. Allan. Their glances met, hers bright with wonder and hope, alight with love. His sly, and calculating.

"Mr. Chester Farnsworth!"

The light went out of Cathie's face. They were calling Chester. She looked at Mr. Allan again. His expression had not changed.

Horoscopes

Sunday, October 19.

Sunday's horoscope presages satisfactory activity and progress in affairs of charity, church and clergy, with employment under a sidereal vibration making for advancement, favors or honors. It is a time to push for these, although the mental attitude toward things in general may be quixotic or unconventional.

Those whose birthday it is are in line for promotion, preferment or honors during the year—that is, to a mild degree. Generally affairs should be active and prosperous, with finance, litigation and business expansion well fortified.

A child born on this day should have much initiative and enterprise, demanding recognition from superiors, those in high places and in employment, although its own mental make-up may have either unique, quixotic, eccentric or original aspects.

Monday, October 20.

Monday's astrological chart shows the advantage of managing affairs with quiet discretion and secret agreements and understanding rather than open contracts. There is an element of subtlety or perculiarity in all the activities of the day, with hints of underhand disturbances and mysterious situations, conspiracy or intrigue which may be most successfully manipulated by kindred methods. Diplomacy and tact may win against craft and scheming.

Those whose birthday it is are enjoined to use tact and diplomacy in the peculiar state of affairs developing during the year. With strategy and wariness against subtle conditions many advantages may be wrested from large corporations or secret societies. Personal contacts may prove gratifying as well.

A child born on this day may be peculiarly gifted to win its way through intrigue, stratagem and "cleverness." It may occupy or attain some unusual place in life or have curious adventures.

Have you got one?

A snooty world has stopped to look—snootily—lingered, and fallen. Hop-o'my Thumb "gowf," manikin golf, midget golf, scintillates on thousands—ho, hundreds of thousands—of erst-while dark, ne'er do-well corners. They say Real Estate is clapping hands over him. Art didn't think so much of him; and the Lofty-Brow and the browser among the refinements of life smiled and passed on. Little Mister Plain Man took to it like a duck to a lilied pond; but George and Gefry Golfer, Letty and Luther Litteraire, Art and Arline Artist, and Sally and Skiffington Society just whizzed by.

But Hop-o'-My-Thumb golf is an insinuating wag, and if you don't want to get thick with him, just don't go the first time. At all, at all. Why an artist has been seen on one; a writer; and Sally and Skiffington are building their own.

Beware of your little boy if you want to stay away from the baby game. For little boys are to blame for a lot of fallen parents. They coaxed them in the first time; and now, though the little boy is usually the best player in the family, nobody plays harder, nor more often shamefacedly suggests "have we got time for a bit of midget golf do you think?" than his grown-up family.

The writer and the writer's little boy's father looked with a blithe and faint scorn on the plodding figures under the twinkling trees on many a corner. And then one day their little blond boy, who somehow inveigles them into doing many things they do not want, and never meant to do, asked to "try it once, Daddy," in a honeyed voice. And now Infant Golf is part of the weekly holiday program, and must be squeezed in, no matter what other grander things betide.

Will next summer bring the Toy-Town golf-tog in as a frock that every-girl must have? Or will the weather-vane world of nineteen-thirty-one be parachute-leaping, father, mother and baby, sister, brother and sweethearts, for an hour's play between dinner and Moompitchers, with Hop-o'-My-Thumb forgotten?

Love's Reawakening

Continuation of Love's Awakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Mary Begins to React Nervously Toward Veritzen

"Well!" Mary said eloquently when the door had closed decisively on the Underwoods, "that's as effective a kick down the cellar stairs as ever was handed to me. 'Run along and sell your papers, little boys. We'll see you later. Ta! Ta!' I hope you're properly squelched, Auntie Madge. You got the toe of a boot; allee samee me!"

I laughed instead of reproving her for her unwarranted comment because I detected a feverishness in her gaiety which told me that she was by no means as indifferent as she appeared to be to Philip Veritzen's melodramatic espionage upon us.

"Mr. Underwood might have been a little less abrupt," I admitted, "but surely you know that is not his usual manner. And surely we can forgive him an even greater degree of rudeness when we consider—"

"I know," Mary said remorsefully. "It must have been something of a smear at that, welcoming back the wife of your buzzom after she's been saying a last farewell to a dying ex-fiance. I don't blame him for wanting to conduct the reunion behind closed doors."

"Mary! Mary!" I expostulated weakly.

My husband's niece looked at me with a grin in which there was a touch of mockery.

"I know I wasn't supposed to know much of what was going on, but you should have hobbled me and put blinders and ear-muffs on me if you didn't want me to get next."

She curved her arms gracefully over her head and whirled into the first steps of one of her dances, broke it off abruptly when I had returned from the telephone order for tea which Harry had asked me to make, and which I had walked away from Mary to put through. With an impetuous little rush she caught me, whirled me toward a sofa, pulled me down upon it and buried her head in my shoulder.

"Don't—don't pay any attention to me, Auntie Madge," she said chokingly. "I didn't mean a word I said. But I've got to keep on talking something. I'm just plain scared, Auntie Madge. What am I going to do?"

Her arms were tensely clinging as she clasped me. I felt a long, rippling shudder go over her body. I put my own arms around her and held her close until she was quiet again. Then I put my hands up, loosened the clasp of her arms, and, with my hands holding her elbows firmly, I held her away from me and looked steadily at her.

"Please remember first that I'm right beside you always in any trouble. That over, tell me of what you are afraid."

"I'd be stark, staring mad if I didn't have you, Auntie Madge," she said. "But I'm afraid that man's too powerful, even for you."

"What man, Mary?" I asked quietly, although I knew very well what her answer would be.

"You know as well as I do," she retorted, not impudently, but with dread conviction. "Mr. Veritzen."

"Why, what do you especially fear from him?"

"If I only knew." The words were almost a wail. "But surely, Auntie Madge, you must realize that the reason he put that detective on our trail was because he wanted to watch me for something. But why? Why should he? I haven't done anything a detective could have any report on, have I, Auntie Madge?"

"What absolute nonsense!" I said. "There were four of us on the car which the detective was trailing on our trip to the Catskills, three on the trip down. Why should you be egotistical enough to suppose that Mr. Veritzen's objective was you, the youngest of the party?"

"You know very well why," she said firmly. "Because he is so terribly angry with me about Noel."

"Of course, that is a possible reason, but will you kindly remember that Mr. Underwood and I were left in charge of Veritzen's affairs. Might he not have set a detective on our movements to find out whether or not we were being faithful to his interests?"

Shoe Trees

Shoes will certainly keep their shape better if trees are put into them as soon as they are removed. Then the trees straighten out the wrinkles before the dampness from the foot has left the shoe and caused the wrinkles to set. Inexpensive trees may be purchased in all 5 and 10-cent stores, so it would prove very inexpensive to take proper care of one's shoes.

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Mixed Grill

Matrimonial Reciprocity: "I'll let you choose my hats if you'll let me pick out your stenographer."

* * *

It really doesn't matter what age a woman is; it's how long she has BEEN that age that counts.

* * *

A woman has reached the "age of discretion," not when she knows a lot about life, but when she knows enough not to tell what she knows.

* * *

Nowadays, a successful marriage is one that lasts until the last grain of rice has disappeared from the luggage, and the pasters on the grips begin to look a little shop-worn.

Perhaps the most striking difference between the modern girl and the old-fashioned girl is that the modern girl appears to be flattered at all the casual little tendernesses, which her mother used to regard as just tiresome impertinence.

* * *

When a man falls in love through his senses, he usually falls out of love lightly and lands on his feet; but when he falls in love through his imagination, he falls out with an awful crash and wakes up in a fog of disillusionment.

Nature plays no favorites; when she hands a man an extra portion of charm and animal magnetism, she is apt to short-change him on backbone and will-power. And when she endows a girl with a cute nose and a lot of "It," she often evens things by curtailing her judgment and cutting out her commonsense in the choice of a husband.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Build Resistance to Colds of Winter

When winter comes, then come winter colds. Indeed, with the frosts of fall these attacks appear. How shall we prevent such troublesome colds? Really, they present a most difficult problem.

DR COPELAND

Nearly all the acute ailments of the nose, throat and lungs are infectious. With the close contacts that come in crowded public places—theater, schools, public conveyances—colds are easily communicated from one person to another.

It behooves everyone to observe certain rules of health and right living. Then cold infections will be kept down to the minimum. To protect others every person who has a cold should be kept as much as possible away from others.

The Travelers' Insurance Society has made seven suggestions that should be exceedingly helpful in the avoidance of infection from colds. They recite, too, how to build up a resistance to colds.

I am giving them to you here:

1. Take regular exercise daily. This may be done by walking to and from work if the distance is reasonable. When this is impracticable simple setting-up exercises for a few minutes night and morning are beneficial. Spend as much time as possible out-of-doors.

2. Put in regular hours of sleep. This is important during epidemics of colds. Sleep restores spent energy and builds up body resistance.

3. Keep the feet dry. If they have become wet change to dry shoes and stockings at the earliest opportunity. A hot foot bath when the feet have been wet or chilled will often help to ward off a cold.

4. When colds are prevalent avoid as much as possible crowded public places.

5. Do not get the direct breath from persons having a cold—and they should protect you by covering the mouth with a handkerchief when they cough or sneeze.

6. Wash the hands frequently, use clean towels or other toilet articles. Avoid putting the fingers to the mouth or nose.

7. Keep the nose, mouth and throat clean. Brush the teeth at least twice a day. Gargle the throat, especially after having been to the theater. Do it every night before retiring.

These are excellent rules to follow. If everyone would live up to them there would be a distinct drop in these devastating epidemics of colds. It is a pity that every winter they sweep over places where many people gather together.

Tell It to Sally

By SALLY MARTIN

Which shall Ellen choose—marriage or death.

Yep. It's come to that, so she says. It all began when she started to play with Pat's heart. Time was when she got a great bang out of throwing him a come-hither look . . . and laughing at him when he declared his love. But now the worm has turned, and it isn't so funny . . . at least for her.

Does she love him, or does she not? Well, she dunno. When she is with him his "flaming kisses make her forget all" . . . but when she isn't . . . ??? . . . and she has only six days in which to make up her mind!

So, if you have a taste for ten, twent', thirt' mellerdrammer, tune in on her tale. It'll save you the price of a movie.

"Dear, Dear Sally:

"I am in a terrible mess, and, oh, how I need your help. Every day I read of all those who seek your help in their fearful problems, so now I, too, am turning to you.

"You see, for a year now, I have been going with a fellow who is in love with me. For the first three months we were just friends, but later he told me of his love for me and I made him make love to me, not caring whether I loved him or not. It was so thrilling, Sally! You just can't imagine!

"I am still in doubt about whether I really do love him . . . or pity him. But I know that he loves me. In fact, I'm so sure of his love that I took advantage of him by making a fool of him before his friends. But I will say that he always took it 'on the chin.'

"Now he wants me to meet his people, and I always laugh at him and take everything he tells me as a joke. And just lately he has told me that he couldn't stand my 'foolishness' any longer and wants me to marry him right away. Or he will shoot himself . . . and me.

"Oh, Sally! When I'm with him . . . his name is Pat, don't you like that name? . . . I love him, I worship him. His flaming hot kisses make me forget all. But when I'm away from him I don't give him a thought . . . except to realize that he isn't good-looking, in fact not even passable.

"So I don't know what to do. Maybe if I do marry him I won't regret taking such a step, after all. But I just can't decide. If I don't love him, I don't want him. What do you think?

"I can't tell my folks about this terrible trouble, or ask their advice, because they don't like Pat any way. You see I come from a wealthy family, while he is very poor. He makes only $50 a week.

"I often think of ending it all by killing myself. I don't know what holds me off. I suppose it's the fact that I'm only 18, and desire to see more of life.

"I pity Pat because he loves me, but I'm not sure about what he may do. And I have only six days more to make up my mind. Which shall it be? An elopement with Pat—or death?

"Do you think that he really will shoot me if I say 'no'? Please help me, dear Sally. I don't know what to do.

"Ellen."

So you don't know what to do, eh?

Well, here's what! Sit down and take a good, long, mean look at yourself. Because, believe me, Baby, you need it! As things now stand, you're as poor an excuse for a female as ever fluffed into this column. Which wouldn't particularly matter if you alone were concerned. But, unfortunately, really worthwhile people take nit-wits like you seriously.

Thinking of "ending it all," are you? Stop making me laugh! You have no more idea of bumping yourself off than I have. But I can tell you what you ARE doing! You're getting a great bang out of visualizing yourself as a romantic and persecuted heroine. Well, you're not one.

Will he shoot you? I'm sure I don't know—nor, to be quite frank, do I greatly care. Maybe he feels like it, but personally, I don't see why any smart guy should mess himself up and waste good gunpowder on hooey like you. My private opinion is that he's just trying to scare some sense into you. And I bet he's wasting his time!

Marriage? Quit using grown-up words, until you know what they mean.

So NOW you know what I think of you and your "flaming kisses" 'n' suicide plots, and I hope it helps what ails you.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Wedding Invitations

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Which is proper, to send wedding invitations or announcements to one's friends who reside here and in other states? It is to be a church wedding held out of this state. My friends are those whose acquaintance I have made during the many years I have been actively engaged in local church work.

N. W.

Wedding announcements are sent only to those who were not invited to the wedding. To your friends you would send invitations to the wedding, no matter where they live, for it is a much greater honor to be sent an invitation to a wedding than it is to be sent an announcement. To your acquaintances you send announcements.

Referring to the Children's Uncle

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Do you consider it improper for my children to address their uncle, who is a doctor, as "uncle"?

2. Should his sisters address him as "doctor"? A. A. B.

1. No, this is the name by which correctly they would address him, that is "uncle," with the first name added: "Uncle John."

2. No. They would naturally address him by his first name.

By B. C. FORBES

CLEVELAND, Oct. 18.—A new Cleveland is arising. The spirit of this new Cleveland is embodied most strikingly in the new Union Station with its 708-foot tower and its magnificent group of terminal buildings, the whole forming a "city within a city," the like of which not even New York or Chicago can boast.

Mr. Forbes

To make way for this colossal enterprise more than a thousand buildings were razed.

THE 52-STORY terminal tower is flanked by a great hotel building, an 18-story medical arts building, an 18-story builders exchange building, an 18-story bank building. A huge department store is now going up. A new postoffice is projected. And other equally important structures are contemplated.

THIS PALATIAL modern city represents a dream come true, a dream of two country lads of working class parentage, whose early earnings came from delivering newspapers, O. P. and M. J. Van Sweringen, now 51 and 49. Something of their graduation from real estate to railroading was told yesterday.

But you can read from cover to cover the official description of the new Union Station and surrounding improvements without finding the slightest mention of these intrepid brothers. Instead of telling how the then youthful Van Swerinsens concieved, first, the need for rapid transportation to their vast Shaker Heights real estate development and, later the possibility of the ultra-ambitious terminal project now taking form, the official record expresses it thus:

"The Union Station development had something of a modest beginning. It grew out of a proposal for rapid transit to Shaker village, then a budding residential district, now an extensively developed home locality just east of Cleveland. The projected rapid transit line required a downtown terminus. Topographical maps showed a ravine leading to the heart of the city, and it was evident the district south of the Square would lend itself most conveniently for the rapid transit terminal. Railroads, too, realized how well the locality adapted itself for the passenger requirements. As a result, there was substituted the larger plan of a monumental travel gateway for railroad and rapid transit lines and a surrounding business development in keeping with Cleveland's status as a great metropolis.

"The terminal improvements will help to usher in a new cycle of Cleveland's development."

UNCONSCIOUSLY Cleveland will be influenced and inspired by the daring, the vision, the initiative which conceived and successfully carried out this massive group of structures. Cleveland already has had its ambition stirred. It sees a bigger and greater Cleveland of tomorrow. A new standard having arisen in its midst, Cleveland will strive to live up to that standard.

Without this inspiration, I doubt whether Cleveland and Clevelanders would be facing these nationwide trying conditions of today with their present calm and confidence, their unruffled determination to forge ahead to bigger things and better days.

ONE CLEVELAND industrial leader, W. J. Austin, of the engineering and building company bearing his name, returned last week from a two months' stay in Russia, with views different from those commonly expressed. Mr. Austin has been doing business in Russia for 18 months.

He is interested in building the mammoth factory at Nijni Novgrod for the production of Ford cars by the Russian government. A complete new city to house 50,000 people is also being created. One 6,000 unit is now under construction and another 6,000 unit is scheduled to start in the spring. The work, Mr. Austin states, is going along very well.

Mr. Austin told me he was greatly impressed by the extremely comprehensive educational work being carried on by the Russian government. He emphasized that it was doing more than any other government on the face of the earth to teach the people, especially through thoroughly illustrated posters, all kinds of useful knowledge—how to live ideally on farms, the evil effects of alcohol, how to prevent and eliminate disease, setting-up exercises, how to swim, how to build radios and a thousand other things.

He has found the Russians punctiliously prompt in meeting every obligation.

CLEVELAND'S many-sided industrial activities are steadily becoming more and more international in their ramifications.

GLASS DEMAND IMPROVES

Manufacturers of window glass report that there was a noticeable increase in the amount of orders booked during the past week, according to National Glass Budget. There was also a larger number of inquiries received. Factory output continues at a very low level for this season of the year. Demand slightly exceeds present production. Market conditions are reported to be fairly stable.

Wage scales are being considered by the different manufacturing interests with the skilled labor employed in the plants. In one instance the scale in effect for the last year has been continued for a period of 60 days. Other wage conferences will take place at an early date.

Some improvement is noted in the demand for rough rolled and wired glass. This gain in business should be continued well on through the remainder of the year. Numerous large structures in prominent cities throughout the country are nearing the stage for glazing. Efforts will be made in the northern part of the country to have the buildings closed in before the arrival of extreme cold weather. It is said that the market is showing a firmer tendency.

JEWEL TEA CO. SALES DROP

The Jewel Tea Company, Inc., reports that its sales for the four weeks ending October 4, 1930, were $1,169,936.62, as compared with $1,309,120.14 for parallel weeks in 1929, a decrease of 10.63 per cent. The average number of sales routes for parallel weeks in 1930 was 1,257, and in 1929, 1,189.

Sales for the first 40 weeks of 1930 were $11,879,190.69, as compared with $12,667,996.83 for a like period in 1929, a decrease of 6.23 per cent. For three weeks the average number of routes in 1930 was 1,237 and in 1929, 1,173.

LIBERTY DAIRY HAS MODERN PLANTS

Ice Cream Is Produced Entirely by Machine; Untouched by Hands

Ice cream made in the modern plant of the Liberty Dairy Products Corporation, is never touched by human hands from the time fresh ingredients are received until the finished product is sold to consumers.

Even in wrapping brick ice cream, only carefully guarded machinery comes into actual contact with the product. The ice cream is delivered to the packing machines through pipes. The boxes and waxed paper are fed into one side of the machine by girls. The entire operation of cutting, wrapping and placing the bricks into boxes is done by machines.

The sealed packages are then ready to be removed by girls for packing preparatory to shipment. Similar types of machines are used for packing ice cream into pails and in preparing it for shipments to customers in other forms.

SURPLUS CARS SHOW GAIN

Class I railroads on September 30 had 394,032 surplus freight cars in good repair and immediately available for service, the car service division of the American Railway Association announced. This was an increase of 4,345 cars compared with September 23, at which time there were 389,687 surplus freight cars.

Surplus coal cars on September 30 totaled 139,416, an increase of 5,594 within approximately a week, while surplus box cars totaled 202,398, a decrease of 1,010 for the same period.

Reports also showed 22,153 surplus stock cars, a decrease of 65 cars below the number reported on September 23, while surplus refrigerator cars totaled 11,855, a decrease of 862 for the same period.

NATIONAL STEEL MARKETS NEW PRODUCT

Nation-Wide Organization To Distribute Cordex; Satisfies Urgent Need

The National Steel Fabric Company, Pittsburgh, is now marketing a new, trade-marked building paper known as cordex. The body of cordex building paper is made from northern sulphate fiber. It is inbuilt with cords which run lengthwise through the paper and are not placed between layers, but are an integral part of the product. No filler is used in the manufacture of cordex and to a high degree it is free from pulverization and resists decomposition.

For several years various authorities in the industry referred to cordex as the "paper that couldn't be made." But according to W. H. Shaffer, Jr., dealer sales manager of the National Steel Fabric Company, the imperative need of the company for such a product led to extensive scientific and industrial research, which eventually resulted in the discovery of cordex.

The field for distribution of cordex will be to dealers, architects, contractors and others throughout the country who have insistently demanded a building paper with the attributes of toughness, durability and waterproofness. Cordex will be marketed throughout the nationwide dealer organization of the National Steel Fabric Company, which is a subsidiary of the Pittsburgh Steel Company.

The specifications of cordex building paper were developed by the firm's fellowship at the Mellon Institute of Industrial Research. Shipments of cordex are now being made from the company's plant. Other products of the National Steel Fabric Company include steeltex, a welded wire fabric, and national reinforcing, a welded wire reinforcing mesh.

STEEL OUTPUT DECLINES HERE

U. S. Steel Puts Out Two Local Blast Furnaces; Industry's Rate 50%

By R. E. V. LUTY.

Steel production in the Pittsburgh district has come down a couple of points in the last week or two, after holding rather steadily at around 55 per cent of capacity since the end of June. The Steel Corporation has put out two blast furnaces since the first of the month, one at Clairton and the other Lucy.

In the industry at large steel ingot production is scarcely above 50 per cent of present capacity, which is somewhat larger than capacity on January 1. On the basis of that capacity, September production was officially reported at 55.1 per cent, as noted a week ago. The trend having been downward to date, and the uniform precedent showing decreases in the last six or eight weeks of a year, the clear prospect is that there will be no material increase in the remainder of the year, though further decreases may be small.

ANOTHER MATTER

The new year is another matter, as there is always a strong favorable influence. After 1921 all the precedents are of increasing production after January 1. Even if a year is to end poorly, it is likely to do well in the early months. Besides the present year, 1923, 1927 and 1929 began well and had poor endings.

Expression of steel production in percentage of capacity is very useful for comparative purposes, but rather misleading as an index of steel consumption, since consumers are not responsible for the capacity. Quantitative comparisons are more informative as to the volume of steel consumption. The most active year before the war was 1912, when there was much construction work and many freight cars and locomotives were built. Since then population has increased 30 per cent and steel making capacity has doubled. The present rate of steel production per capita is only about 15 per cent under the per capita rate of 1912, yet general trade is rather poor, and very poor compared with 1912.

STEEL DOING WELL

Steel is now doing fully as well in tonnage as should be expected in view of the state of general business. An improvement in steel can be expected only as general trade improves, except for such short term seasonal improvement as may according to precedent occur in steel after January 1. In general, steel cannot be expected to improve in advance of general business. The old dictum of steel (or iron) being the barometer of trade is no longer applicable. At a given time steel may be a measure of current activity, but its movements are not prophetic or barometric. In the old days when times had been poor and were going to get better railroads bought cars and locomotives and decided upon track extensions while contracts were made for skyscrapers.

The annual rail buying movement is in progress. Orders are later and smaller than in any of the last three years, when the totals in buying movements lay between 1,500,000 and 2,000,000 tons. This has been one of the steadiest outlets for steel and a loss in that connection is correspondingly impressive, but the general importance of the tonnage is sometimes overrated. Assuming for convenience a loss of 500,000 tons of rail business, that amount would represent engagement of only a little over 1 per cent of the total steel making capacity of the country in a year, or say 2 per cent if the rails were to be made in a period of seven months.

CHINESE TREES FEATURE AT LOT PLAN

Landscaping on a large scale is planned this fall by the Southern Hills Land Company among the home sites in the 170-acre addition to Virginia Manor plan, Mt. Lebanon. The development includes an entire ridge south of the Cochran road near Bower Hill road.

Rare Chinese trees and shrubs are to be included in the plantings. A number of Chinese elms are to be used. These trees were introduced into America recently and attracted immediate attention because of their rapid growth. Chinese honeysuckle with pink flowers and blue leaves will also be planted.

All of the Virginia Manor plan and addition is carefully restricted to homes of attractive architecture. James H. Duff, president of the Southern Hills Land Company, states that these regulations will be maintained.

BUILDING ACTIVE

Building is already active in Virginia Manor addition. Walter L. Prederick has completed a residence of French design in Osage road. Thomas B. Garman, architect for the plan, has started a home in the same neighborhood. Dr. C. G. Eicher is taking bids for a new home.

Until recently the acreage was a part of Scott Township. Its annexation to Mt. Lebanon was accomplished through a petition by the owners. The community is closely connected with the rest of Mt. Lebanon. It is served by stores and schools located only a short distance away.

GOOD TRANSPORTATION

Virginia Manor plan has the advantage of three improved automobile routes from the downtown district. One is by way of the Liberty tubes, West Liberty avenue and the Bower Hill road, another by way of the Banksville road and a third by way of the Greentree road. The motorist may reach the plan in about 15 minutes from the business district. A bus line with regular schedule serves the neighborhood.

The original Virginia Manor plan of 36 acres includes a variety of attractive architecture. English cottages, Normandy village types, French houses and colonial homes of almost every period are found. All of the work done in the plan is supervised by a resident architect, a feature which ranks it among the best planned real estate developments in the United States.

BANK DEBITS DECREASE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—Bank debits, outside of New York City, for the week ended October 11, showed a decline from the preceding week and was lower than a year ago. Loans and discounts of Federal reserve member banks also declined from both prior periods. Interest rates on time money were higher than a week ago while call rates showed no change. Both rates were lower than a year ago. Prices for representative industrial and railroad stocks declined sharply from the preceding period, and were lower than the same period last year. Bond prices showed a fractional loss, when compared with the prices of the preceding week; however, a marked gain was noted over a year ago.

Wholesale prices as measured by Fisher's index, for the first time in the several weeks showed an upward tendancy. As compared with the same period in 1929, a marked decline was noted.

Northerns' Merger Case to Be Reheard

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—The Interstate Commerce Commission has yielded to the request of numerous state railroad commissions and ordered a re-opening for further hearing of the Great Northern-Northern Pacific Railroad merger case.

Further hearings will be held at a time and place to be designated later.

River Traffic Shows Large Gain

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 18.

RIVER TRAFFIC has continued to gain uninterrupted by the dullness in general business. Month by month the number of industrial organizations which have found economies through the use of inland waterways has increased.

In June the Inland Waterways Corporation, the entire stock of which is government owned, showed gains in both its North and sound bound traffic on the Mississippi River. Figures for more recent months do not present an accurate picture, since low water due to the abnormal drought of the past summer seriously impeded river traffic. Under normal conditions, however, river commerce would not be handicapped by low water.

River Traffic Doubled

SHIPMENTS BY THE Federal Barge Line down the river in June reached 63,577 tons which represented a gain of 116 per cent over the 29,426 tons reported for June of last year.

By far the greater part of the increase was due to the resumption of the export movement of wheat this year. A total of 40,161 tons of wheat were carried by the line in June. This was a gain of 31,009 tons, which tended to accentuate the trend toward the use of river transportation. Even if the gain in wheat is ignored, the line's downriver traffic would show an increase of 11 per cent.

More Products Carried

WHILE THE MOVEMENT of some products on the barge line was reduced due to business conditions, many items held their ground and the shipments of several new products reached substantial proportions.

The upriver movement of freight by the line also showed a satisfactory gain in spite of the dullness in business in both the North and the South. In June of this year 44,691 tons were carried. This volume was exceeded in only one previous month. It represented a gain of 5 per cent over June, 1929.

New Barge Line Started

THE INAUGURATION of service by the new Mississippi Valley Barge Line, first privately owned line to operate as a common carrier with joint rail and river rates, will greatly stimulate the use of the rivers for the shipment of freight, in the opinion of rivermen.

The new line, which is operating between Cincinnati and New Orleans, will make it possible for smaller shippers to avail themselves of the economies of river transportation. Since the war the large companies with enough traffic to warrant the operation of their own fleets have been moving large tonnages by river. The new line will make a similar service available to shippers whose business is not large enough to warrant the maintenance of their own fleets.

Within the past three years oil and gasoline have been added to the products which form a large part of the traffic on the Mississippi River system. Several large oil companies have tank barges in operation and are planning to add to their fleets in the future.

DIRECT TRAINS BY PHONE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—The dots and dashes of the Morse telegraph wires are fast giving way to the telephone as a means of regulating the movements of the thousands of trains that daily move over the rails of the railroads of this country.

Trains on nearly two-thirds of the total rail mileage of this country are now being handled by telephone, the telegraph and telephone section of the American Railway Association announced.

Reports just received from the railroads by that section show that on January 1, 1930, telephones were used for the transmission of train orders over 154,277 miles of road, compared with 101,548 miles which continue to use telegraph wires.

The extent of the increase in the use of the telephone for the transmission of train orders is shown by the fact that on January 1, 1920, the miles of road on which the telephone was used totaled 119,554. On the same date, the telegraph was being used on 134,667 miles of road.

Cocoa Exhange Seat Sells Higher

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—The New York Cocoa Exchange membership of J. A. McGlade has been sold to E. L. Cleverly, for another for $2,300, an increase of $100 over the last previous sale.

LITTLE CHANGE IN LOCAL TRADE

High Temperatures Hurt Wearing Apparel Sales; Coal Production Higher

Business conditions locally show comparatively little change from those prevailing last week, temperatures being somewhat too high for the season and buying of wearing apparel being affected thereby, according to R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review. Retail trade is developing slowly and continues lighter in volume than a year ago at this time. Manufacturers of leather goods report business considerably below normal, with demand for trunks particularly light.

Demand for leather is slow and prices are lower than they were last year. Construction work continues quiet and the demand for lumber and other building materials continues slow.

OIL OUTPUT OFF

Manufacturers of electrical equipment are operating at a lower rate than at any time this year and sales are estimated at about 25 per cent below normal. There has been some improvement in demand for plumbing supplies and heating equipment.

Production of crude oil is slightly lower, and some price reductions are reported from the Mid-Continent field. Production of bituminous coal shows a slight increase in this district, although the rate continues about 15 per cent lower than a year ago, when there is an over production of slack, the price of which is lower.

While there has been a slight improvement in a few lines, collections generally continue to average slow, particularly with jobbers.

Trans-Lux to Press Patent Litigation

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—United States Court of Appeals has granted the application of Trans-Lux Daylight Picture Screen Corporation for leave to re-open the patent litigation brought against them by News Projection Corporation in 1925 on their Proctor patent and which action was finally decided against Trans-Lux in May, 1928. The basis of the application was newly discovered evidence.

EVENING SUN-TELEGRAPH MARKETS

Stocks Decline

Local Market Steady

STOCKS UNDER PRESSURE AT OPENING

Numerous Losses of Point Shown at Start—Steel And P. R. R. Off About ½

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—(AP.)—Stocks were still under pressure at the opening of today's market. American Telephone, Johns Manville, American Can, Westinghouse Electric and New York Central lost about a point each, and United States Steel, Bethlehem Steel, Public Service of New Jersey and Pennsylvania Railroad, about ½. General Electric, opening with a block of 5,000 shares, was fairly steady, sagging only ⅛.

MOTORS TO PAY DIVIDEND

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—Assurances that General Motors Corporation would declare the regular quarterly dividend of 75 cents on the common stock at the next meeting, to be held around the middle of November, were contained in a statement made by Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president, to a representative of Dow, Jones & Co., in response to a question concerning the corporation's dividend prospects.

Having his attention called to rumors circulated in the financial district, Mr. Sloan dismissed these reports, saying:

"There is no basis for concern over safety of General Motors common dividend. There has been no discussion within the corporation concerning the dividend, and no reason for such discussion in advance of the directors' meeting. Speaking for myself and associates in the management, we are confident that the regular dividend will be declared in November."

Wholesale Prices Show Little Change

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—The general level of wholesale prices in September varied little from the August level, the Bureau of Labor Statistics announced today, placing the purchasing power of the 1926 dollar in that month at $1.88.

Prices of farm products showed an average gain of one-half of one per cent. Foods as a whole rose appreciably, the net increase being nearly 2½ per cent. Textile products showed a perceptible decrease and metal products as a whole moved downward.

Kolster Radio Sale Approved by Court

NEWARK, N. J., Oct. 18.—Sale of the bankrupt Kolster Radio Corporation to S. P. Woodard & Co., New York, for an unannounced sum was approved in Chancery Court here. The buyer agreed to invest $4,500,000 in the concern and to meet all old claims.

It is the intention of the buyers to re-establish the firm on a capitalization of 3,000,000 common shares. Common stockholders of the company will be given one share in the new company for three old shares. Preferred stock will receive one share in exchange for two.

Duquesne Gas Gets Large Producer

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—The Duquesne Gas Corporation announced that an additional natural gas well with more than 1,100,000 cubic feet open flow came in Wednesday in Fayette County, Pennsylvania. This new well brings the total of producing wells in the Duquesne gas group to 166.

$1,000,000 Bus Line Deal Completed

CINCINNATI, Oct. 18.—Colonial Stages of Cincinnati has purchased the Atlantic & Pacific stages, which operates bus lines between St. Louis and Los Angeles, for $1,000,000.

Union Carbide & Carbon Earnings to Equal $3 a Share.

Net profit of Union Carbide and Carbon Corporation in the third quarter was larger than in either of the two preceding quarters. Earnings for the period probably will be equal to almost 80 cents a share on 9,000,743 shares now outstanding. For nine months earnings should be roughly $20,000,000, or about $2.20 a share, making it highly probable that final net for the full year will be more than $3 a share unless there is an unforeseen decline in fourth quarter earnings. In the calendar year 1929, the corporation earned equivalent of $3.93 a share on the basis of 9,000,743 shares now outstanding.

Chicago and North Western showed earnings of only 48 cents a share on its common stock in the first seven months, compared with dividend requirements of approximately $2.92 a share for the period on the basis of the current $5 a share annual rate. However, the road enjoys its largest earnings in the final months of the year. September net operating income was the largest for any month so far, according to estimates, and October net probably will exceed September. For the full year, the road is likely to show a minimum of $4 a share earned on the common.

The stock market has adopted a "watchful waiting" attitude, it appears, with the rank and file of leading operators, whether bulls or bears, resting on their oars, and seemingly waiting for something to happen. For the moment the market is doing little more than absorbing liquidation left over from the decline which subsided a week ago after having run for a period of four weeks with little interruption. As stocks slipped away under yesterday's selling, however, most of the leaders were once more approaching the lows of the decline and a rather liberal sprinkling of active stocks dipped into new low territory. This condition led many to watching things closely in the belief that a test of the recently established resistance levels may be close at hand.

On the basis of estimates current indications are that General Motors will just about cover its present dividend requirements this year. The corporation reported net equivalent to $2.15 a share for the first six months, but profits thus far in the final half year have evidently been rather sparse. At any rate it is estimated that net for the September quarter ran around $21,700,000, which would be equivalent to about 50 cents a share on the 43,500,000 shares of common stock outstanding. The final quarter is expected to produce earnings running to about 35 cents a share for the stock, unless, of course, conditions should suddenly improve in an important way. This would indicate net equivalent to $3 a share for the entire year, or just enough to provide for dividends now being paid at that rate.

Directors of the St. Louis-San Francisco Railway are scheduled to meet on November 5, next, to act on dividends due on the preferred stock at that time. Despite the fact that current open market prices for the common stock might be regarded as discounting a probable cut in the $8 rate, there is a disposition in New York to look for the declaration of the regular quarterly payment of $2 a share at that time. At current levels the stock offers a return of better than 11 per cent. Belief in some quarters is that the management will order the regular payment this time despite the status of earnings.

When the decline got under way some five weeks ago, or along about September 10 following the publication of the steel tonnage report showing a cut of more than 400,000 tons in unfilled orders of the corporation, much of the selling at the time was attributed to individuals and trusts seeking to establish losses to be used for income tax purposes. Under the law the seller of a stock or other security for that purpose must permit a period of 30 days to elapse from date of such sale before repurchasing the stock. That period has elapsed with some time to spare now and it should soon be apparent whether or not any appreciable proportion of the selling of a month or five weeks ago was for such purpose. If so and with stocks well under levels prevailing at that time, the opportunity for replacement is certainly favorable around current levels.

Navy Department Asks Fuel Oil Bids

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—Bids for 745,000 barrels of Bunker Fuel Oil will be opened on November 4, the Navy Department announces. Deliveries are to be made at the East Coast points in the first half of 1931.

Noranda Dividend Not Endangered

WINNIPEG, Oct. 18.—Directors of Noranda Mines, Ltd., are not considering omission or reduction of the present dividend in view of the present price of copper, according to N. A. Timmins, of Montreal, a director of Noranda.

LONE STAR GAS FIRMS AFTER EARLY DIP

Fuel Leader Depressed At Start, but Resists Decline; Rally Seen

Prices on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange dipped moderately in the early dealings as the market was called upon to absorb more selling forced out of weakened margin accounts by the previous session's decline on the "big board."

Lone Star Gas was the center of trading interest in the local market, but the early sales list included more issues than usual at the start. In the first half-hour 12 different stocks came into the market, as against a general average of about six in previous session's this week.

Lone Star backed down fractionally under weight of the initial offerings, but after getting with a half-point of the bottom reached in the break last fall, met good support and steadied up noticeably. The industrials showed a fairly steady tone also, and there were no heavy offerings in that section.

The New York market appeared to be meeting good support on a scale down, and observers were confident of a rally, on technical grounds, if for no other reason.

STEEL OUTLOOK IMPROVING

YOUNGSTOWN, Oct. 18.—Leading manufacturers in the Youngstown district find more signs of encouragement in the steel industry outlook than a week ago. Where a week ago they described general conditions for the industry as no worse, this week conditions are a little better. Inquiries are stronger than a week ago for flat steels and there has been no diminishing in demand for tubular products.

Van Camp Packing Offers Stock Rights

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—Van Camp Packing Company directors have decided to offer stockholders $1,250,000 additional common stock at $7.50 a share, with rights entitling the purchaser of each new share to buy one additional share at $10 on or before December 31, 1934.

Warner-Columbia In $3,000,000 Deal

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—Warner Bros. Pictures has contracted with Columbia Pictures Corporation for the entire 1930-31 Columbia production of 20 audible features to be exhibited in all Warner theaters. The deal involves $3 000,000 in bookings.

Sun Oil Company Restores Gas Price

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—Sun Oil Company has restored the price of 19 cents a gallon on standard grade gasoline, which had been in effect until a 3-cent cut was made in price by 12 major oil companies in this district two days ago.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND VIEWS

THE MARKET OUTLOOK

After the worst decline the market has experienced in a long time, few look for a sustained recovery. Many traders will be satisfied if the market fluctuates within narrow limits over the next several weeks. A big rise at this time would not be in harmony with business conditions. Many consider prices as too low now to warrant another big break that would put stocks down to new low records. There is good buying in the market, but it is of a cautious kind. Big supporting orders are lacking. "Wait until business gets a little better and the outlook more encouraging," declared a banker, "and you will get action without application of strong arm methods. People can buy good stocks now with every assurance that they will make good money over the next year or two. But I would advise buyers either to buy outright or hold sufficient cash in reserve to protect themselves in case of further breaks."

EUROPEAN SUGAR BEETS

The 1930-31 beet sugar crop of Europe, including Russia, was estimated on September 30 at 10,594,000 short tons, compared with an estimate of 9,153,000 short tons for the season just ended. Estimate was made by F. O. Licht, of Madgeburg, Germany, and made public here by the Department of Agriculture. Outside of Russia the crop is placed at 8,654,000 short tons, against 8,106,000 short tons reported for 1929-30. Prussian sugar beet production, amounting to about 75 per cent of the German total sugar beet crop, is estimated at 11,354,000 short tons for 1930, an increase of about 21 per cent over the 1929 harvest.

OFFICE SPACE ABUNDANT

The recent completion of many large office buildings in New York, as well as in other leading cities, coupled with the check administered to business expansion by the general trade recession, has resulted in a temporary overabundance of rental space, a current survey of Standard Statistics Company says. It adds that as yet there is no movement to make drastic cuts in office rental rates and many owners likely will prefer to maintain their positions on a basis of 60 to 80 per cent of space occupancy pending a revival of trade.

TRACKWORK SHIPMENTS

Shipments of fabricated tee rail trackwork of 60 pounds per yard or heavier declined to 5,642 tons in September from a total of 6,812 tons in August, the American Iron and Steel Institute reports. Shipments for September last year amounted to 12,962 tons. Shipments for the third quarter this year totaled 21,228 tons, compared with 36,860 tons in the preceding quarter and 41,624 tons for the third quarter last year.

ELECTRICITY IN AFRICA

The use of electricity both for industrial purposes and in the home is showing a steady increase in the Union of South Africa, according to Assistant Trade Commissioner E. B. Lawson. This increase, it is pointed out, has been reflected in increased shipments of electrical goods from the United States. Last year, total American exports of this class had a value of approximately $2,000,000, which was four times the figure registered in 1922.

TRADE CHARTS SHOW TURN IN TRENDS

Lamont Is Impressed With Upward Change in Curves Of Business Activity

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—Robert P. Lamont, secretary of commerce, is in a mood to let the business statistical indicators talk for themselves, and is disinclined to put himself in a position where he can be criticised for unwarranted optimism concerning the business outlook.

M. S. Rukeyser

Nevertheless, in chatting informally with him about the passing show in business at home and abroad, I found him very much impressed with the fact that certain curves of business activity have, in recent weeks, either stopped declining or have turned upward. Not wanting to give any premature authoritativeness to the change of trend until waiting to see if it is sustained for a longer period, Mr. Lamont has refrained from making public the new data. An examination of the available material by this writer, however, discloses that the curves of wholesale prices, costs of living, and payrolls have reversed their downward trend since the end of the summer.

FORWARD BUYING

The Secretary of Commerce, who had previously been president of the American Steel Foundries Company, told me that an encouraging sign was the disposition of large interests to make forward commitments in raw commodities. Mr. Lamont revealed that this new policy was not only true of domestic corporations, but to some extent of European buyers. The secretary, pointing out that cotton was selling at about two-thirds of the average cost of production, said that he had heard instances where substantial European interests had taken advantage of 10-cent cotton to place orders for their requirements two years ahead.

The Department of Commerce, Mr. Lamont disclosed, regards the $9,000,000 gain in imports in September over the previous month as significant, particularly since it runs against the normal seasonal trend. In the previous three years, September had shown substantial losses in imports as compared with August. Mr. Lamont thinks that imports are a more significant index of the temper of domestic trade than exports, which reflect foreign economic conditions. In the import gain, Mr. Lamont sees a disposition on the part of domestic business interests to replenish depleted supplies.

STORES SHOW GAIN

Mr. Lamont regards the early autumn pickup in retail trade, as disclosed by department store reports, as better than seasonal. He notes that the trades that show an improvement are those making goods going directly into consumption. On the other hand, makers of production goods, including steel and iron, have in some instances receded further.

Whereas many observers are already worrying about a difficult winter, in view of the normal seasonal letdown in winter months, Department of Commerce executives are hopeful, if present early harbingers of improvement prove more than a flash in the pan, that the situation this winter period will be no more depressed than it now is. If business should maintain the status quo through the winter, it would be really showing improvement by resisting the seasonal trend downward.

Queried about the results of the recent conference on housing, in which President Hoover is so much interested, Mr. Lamont said that committees are being formed to make intensive studies. Mr. Lamont indicated that they were concerned with substantial long term results an dhe said it would be a year before they really would affect the volume of construction. President Hoover has long felt that encouragement of residential building would generate forces that would make for general recovery. The President considers good homes basic from a social as well as an economic standpoint, but he is of the opinion that substantial factual studies must be made before outside stimulous can be applied in an effective manner.

CONSUMPTION STABLE

Secretary Lamont is impressed with the stability of consumption, which would be entirely uninterrupted were it not for unemployment. Though several million are unemployed, Mr. Lamont considers it important to remember that more than 40,000,000 persons are gainfully employed.

Treasury officials, on the other hand, see no conclusive evidence of any important change in the general business situation. Confident of ultimate recovery, they are nevertheless inclined to believe that reduced purchasing power, resulting from the drought, general agricultural distress, and unemployment militates gainst any near term radical change in business. These officials believe that the chief help that the government can give is in pushing public works. Secretary Mellon has revealed that thus far this year commitments for federal construction have exceeded $43,000,000, and that further contracts would be let before the end of the year. Though helpful in mitigating unemployment, public works in the aggregate are not large enough to prove a decisive factor in prosperity and depression. President Hoover in his Cleveland speech pointed out, for example, that the volume of possible expansion of construction in private industries is about four or five times as great as that in public works.

Motor Operations Affect Bohn's Earnings

DETROIT, Oct. 18.—Bohn Aluminum and Brass Corporation operations for quarter ended September 30 is likely to add little if any earnings to the net profit of $688,766 after charges and taxes reported for the first six months this year. Low rate of activity by the motor industry sharply affected Bohn's operations in the third quarter.

Earnings for the first six months this year were equivalent to $1.95 a share on 352,418 no-par share of stock, comparing with $5.08 a share in first half of 1929. For the nine months ended September 30, 1929, Bohn reported $2,474,906 net, equal to $7.03 a share on 352,198 shares.

Silver Production Shows Decrease

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—Companies which in 1929 produced 87 per cent of the world's supply of silver, reported production amounted to 16,513,000 fine ounces in July, the latest month for which figures are available, against 18,607,000 in June and 21,657,000 in July, 1929.

United States output in September was 3,717,000 ounces, against 3,835,000 in August and 4,634,000 in September, 1929.

ROLLING MILL MAINTAINS WAGES

Letter to Stockholders Says Five-Year Average Should Determine Policy

MIDDLETOWN, O., Oct. 18.—George M. Verity, chairman of the American Rolling Mill Company, has sent a letter to stockholders pointing out that throughout the recent period of lessened business activity wages and dividends have been maintained in the belief that stability in every phase of industrial life is the thing most needed to insure continuous employment and prosperity. He adds that this has been the established policy of the company and has been followed consistently.

LONG TERM POLICIES

Continuing, Mr. Verity says:

"There can be no worthwhile stability where business, in its larger policies, is too largely influenced by the results obtained in a period of less than five years. The cost of these periods of business recession, which come every six to 10 years, is not all loss, as substantial reduction in overhead and in management expense has been effected in a way that is only possible in periods of business depression. Plant modernization has continued, with the result that our three-year program of additions and improvements at Ashland and Butler divisions and of the complete revamping of Middletown works to bring it up to the new standards of operation first developed at Ashland is practically completed.

BOOKINGS INCREASE

"Many outstanding leaders in commerce, finance and industry are of the opinion that the worst of the drastic depression through which industry and business generally has been passing is now over, and that a gradual improvement may reasonably be expected. An increase in our bookings during the past few weeks lends support to that view of the situation."

Discussing the acquisition of Sheffield Steel Corporation some months ago, Mr. Verity points out that this step further diversified Armco's operations, both geographically and as to products, and is expected to open the way to more complete diversification throughout the organization's various operations. He added that the co-ordination of the two companies had gone forward without any of the usual lost motion incident to a merger of this character.

CHEESE PRICE QUIZ ON

MADISON, Wis., Oct. 18.—The State Department of Agriculture and Markets ordered an investigation of the activities of the Plymouth Cheese Board "to determine whether or not cheese prices have been in accord with actual supply and demand or have been manipulated by the board."

The trade output from January to September of this year amounted to 190,800,000 pounds as compared to the five-year average of 204,000,000 pounds for these months, the department said. This decrease warrants "a complete and thorough study of the price fixing methods of the board," the agriculture commissioners said.

The board has a limited power to determine the price of cheese throughout the United States, meeting each week to set the price for the ensuing week, the commissioners said.

A drop of 1½ cents per pound last week was the immediate cause of the investigation order. The agriculture commissioners said they had received reports that the price this week would be dropped an additional half-cent per pound, in the face of considerably reduced production.

Commissioner H. M. Knipfel said Wisconsin farmers would lose from $50,000 to $60,000 a week if the price was dropped one cent a pound.

MASTER MYSTERIES By ARTHUR HOERL

THE CUSTOMS FRAUD

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE.

The steamer Ruratania, from England, is bringing the Cardiz jewels. They belonged to the Czar of Russia. There is a sinister history behind them. The steamer docks and it is revealed that the gems have been stolen. Albert Whitely, the messenger bringing them to America, had placed the jewels in the ship's safe. Robin Dale learns that on the trip across one man was lost overboard and another died a natural death. The safe holding the jewels was opened only once on the trip. Dale calls at Whitely's hotel and learns that he has mysteriously disappeared. Whitely was abducted while en route to his hotel. Dale decides to investigate the messenger's belongings, which are at the hotel. When he arrives Whitely has returned. He explains that those who had taken him prisoner released him again so he could accept a consignment of gems to be taken to London. They plan to steal them from Whitely. Boris Tronski is the man who fell overboard from the Ruratania. More important, Dale learns that Floyd Simmons, the man who died on shipboard, was attended by two nurses, who communicated with a Lois Gambier in New York. Dale works on the assumption that there is some connection between the two deaths and the theft of the jewels. Scotland Yard cables that Tronski was an agent of the Soviet. Dale calls on Lois Gambier. She is the sister of Simmons. They were going to Arizona because of Simmons' tubercular condition. After leaving Lois Gambier's hotel, Dale is attacked and rendered unconscious.

Now Go On With the Story.

CHAPTER VI.

Robin Dale regained consciousness in darkness. After a long time his eyes became adjusted to it and he discovered, as he gazed upward from his bound position on what appeared to be an army cot, that the ceiling came to a point in the center. The room fitted the description Whitely had given of his prison room. Undoubtedly it was the cupola of a dwelling.

Dale found that he thought more clearly in the dark. He thrilled at one discovery . . . fear! It was fear which gave the key to the entire affair. They feared him now and thus he was made a prisoner.

He would work back now, using his capture as a starting point. Little by little things became clear, standing forth like cameos. There were a few vague spots, but he felt confident that truths would fit into them when he arrived at the correct analysis. Bronski fitted neatly into his niche . . . Simmons was a little more vague, and because of that so was Mrs. Gambier.

Once, it must have been breakfast time, and again at lunch, two dark forms entered the small, square room through a trap door. They brought food. One unbound him while the other fed him after a low, tense command that any false move on his part would mean instant death.

Dale hated the idea of dying, so young and with so much to live for, so he ate in docile silence.

When lunch was over they bound him to the cot again. As the two forms were about to go down through the trap one of them uttered a hoarse whisper.

"Go through with your duty and you be damned!" Both of the forms laughed coarsely until the grating sound was shut off by the dropping of the trap. During his meals Dale had surveyed the place as well as he could. The little room was boarded up on all sides so that, if there were any windows, they had been effectively closed up.

There was a church somewhere in the neighborhood which tolled the hours. After lunch Dale reckoned the single toll was one. Ever so long afterwards the bell tolled two . . .

Suddenly Dale gave a startled cry. He shouted out at the top of his lungs for the answer had come, suddenly, like a bolt out of the sky. The final, vague points had been cleared up and he had not even recognized it until now, bound and helpless, it might prove altogether useless.

For 3 o'clock was the deadline! Did he fail to use his information by that time it would be too late! In a frenzy he worked on his bonds . . . at first it seemed a hopeless task, but he persisted, wriggled and squirmed and tugged. He knew for a certainty there was no one left in the house. It seemed hours since 2 o'clock had tolled and he had only until three!

It really was less than 15 minutes when he had overturned the cot. He wrestled with it thus for what seemed an interminable time . . . and then freedom at last! He clutched frantically at the trap, dropped through the opening to the floor below, down two other flights of stairs, looking neither right nor left, and finally crashed into the open.

He had come out of an old-fashioned wooden structure that stood alone in a cluster of trees. Weeds had overgrown everything. He followed the path until he came to the road, a road little used now. It was a choice of east or west—he took the latter and half a mile along the road he came to a farmhouse.

It was 2:20 when he entered the farmhouse. He learned that he was near Valley Stream on Long Island; that the best time he could hope to make into New York was one hour. But Dale knew better than that. He gave himself five minutes for two phone calls.

The first was to Capt. Blake; he made it short and sweet.

"Get your men up to Albert Whitely's room at the Hotel Cecil-Abbey not later than 3 o'clock or it'll be too late. I'll be there!" And he hung up for there was another call to make. This one was to Inspector Carlin.

"Carlin, you'll get the party with the Cardiz diamond if you'll be at Albert Whitely's room at the Cecil-Abbey at 3 o'clock sharp. Come prepared, for you'll be dealing with a desperate character."

Ten minutes later Dale was at Jamaica on a train bound for Pennsylvania Station. He'd have six minutes to get from the station to the Cecil-Abbey. The way he felt he could do it in four.

At one minute to three Robin Dale alighted from a taxi half a block from the entrance to the Hotel Cecil-Abbey. He hurried into the lobby in time to intercept Capt. Blake, Sergt. Jardin and two other detectives at the elevator. Dale saw Inspector Carlin entering the lobby with two of his men.

They all went up together to the fourth floor. All Robin Dale would tell them was to set two men in the hallway, one at the elevator, and another at the stairs, while the others burst into Albert Whitely's suite.

Robin Dale went to the door of Room 417 and knocked lightly. Then they waited in a strained silence.

(How did Robin Dale know that 3 o'clock was the deadline? What gave him the final clue to the solution of the mystery? How did he connect the man overboard, the death and the theft? In what manner did the Czarina's jewels get through the customs men? What was going on behind the door of Room 417? Read the solution in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph a week from today.)

SOLUTION TO

'The Bride of Death'

By ARTHUR HOERL.

Shortly after 11 Robin Dale sat in a room at the headquarters at Laguna with Alonzo Franks and Prosecutor Sherid. They were keenly on edge to hear the reporter's story.

"As unbelievable as it is," Dale began, "there was obviously only one answer to these atrocious crimes. And yet, that answer could never have been written unless the body of Fred Wagner was recovered.

"Go back to the beginning, the foundation of the crimes. It is evident now that they both took place on the night of the wedding. Wagner, we learn, saw Elsie Carroll running toward the launch. He followed. Before any one else reached them the launch was gone.

"We must assume, therefore, that they were both aboard, both because Wagner was not at the shore, and because of what has since been discovered. The tragedy, or a portion of it, was enacted on the launch. It never reached the yacht and was later found tied up at the dock. In addition, its anchor was gone.

"Fred Wagner met his death at that time. He was thrown overboard with the rope of the anchor tied about him. Whoever did it brought the launch back to shore. That much seems obvious.

"Who was it? Surely not Elsie Carroll, for she, at the time, was dead!

"I went into Los Angeles tonight to confirm what I already knew. There was only one person near the launch after it was so mysteriously tied up at the dock. Louise Donahue. Norcross grabbed her in mistake for Elsie. That was very significant.

"Isn't it logical that Fred Wagner ran after Louise believing her to be Elsie? Our imagination must be used to reenact that part of the drama. Louise is running for the launch. She unties it frantically, but not quickly enough, for Wagner jumps into the launch as it goes away. He is astounded when he finds Louise instead of Elsie. He cannot understand and asks for an explanation. Louise, beside herself with fear and frenzy, waits for the opportunity to smash some heavy implement, probably a wrench or a hammer, on Wagner's head. She hurriedly cuts the rope holding the anchor, ties it about Wagner's body and tumbles him overboard. She returns to the dock. Coming off she is met by Norcross who does not suspect the truth.

"But why? Wagner's overtaking of the launch has thrown a monkey-wrench into an otherwise perfect plot. When Louise stepped into the launch Elsie was already dead! Her action was a trick to make the guests believe Elsie had gone aboard the yacht.

"At the time Elsie was within one of the trunks in the Carroll home, dead from strychnine poisoning! One of the very trunks which the guests helped to load aboard the yacht. So Elsie did get aboard, but inside a trunk.

"You remember, the next morning Roy Carroll brought his own trunk back to shore, or at least took it off the yacht. On the way in he threw it overboard, with Elsie inside! It was 10 days before the spring lock gave and her body rose to the surface. This is why there were no marks on her body showing that any rope had been tied about her.

"On the trip from Los Angeles, with candy or any edible, Carroll had poisoned his wife and placed her body in the trunk. Any wonder the guests could not find her when they arrived shortly after.

"The motive is simple—the oldest motive in the world. Roy Carroll did not love Elsie Donahue. Louise was the one he wanted and, unfortunately, she wanted him. But there was Elsie's money. They were not satisfied, they wanted that, too.

"That's why they schemed out this atrocious plot. It would have worked if Fred Wagner's body had never been recovered, for who could have proven, who would ever have believed, that Wagner was not the murderer and had apparently disappeared from the face of the earth?

"Fortunately Carroll overplayed his part. The refusal to accept any of Elsie's money, while it was meant to appear that he had absolutely no mercenary motive, was, under the surface, really the tip-off. Of course, it was unnecessary for him to take the money. Louise would get it, but had it not already been planned that he get Louise? It was a grand gesture, but a bit too grand.

"I saw Norcross tonight. As I expected, he had been around the house, hoping to see Elsie, while the others chased up and down the beaches. He stated positively that not a soul was there during that time. He certainly would have seen Louise, if, as she says, she came from the house and walked to the beach. He did not see her because she was not there. She was in the launch. He did not see her go out on the dock but he saw her walk from it.

"I telephoned tonight that you need not worry about making the arrest. You'll find Louise on the yacht and I'm sure Carroll will also be aboard regardless of the statement that he is going to leave the vicinity and go into seclusion. They are really imprisoned on their own yacht which you can overtake even if it gets under way."

There was another, the closing tragedy of the case, when the police boarded the Sea Gull the following morning. Carroll met them on deck. He was confronted with the proof of his part in the terrible crimes. Before the police could stop him Carroll sprang to the rail and leapt into the sea. He never came to the surface.

Louise must have been listening from the cabin. When they went there for her she was dead. Strychnine. It had probably been left over or secreted by Louise against a time like that. A conscience-fund.

The tragic figure in the case was Mrs. Donahue, blind, helpless and bereaved. Out of pity for her, to withhold the shock that would have killed her, too, the truth was not told. The police explained to her that Elsie had been heard from and that Louise had been obliged to go to her. Mrs. Donahue would proceed with her ocean voyage and when she returned her daughters would be waiting.

But the reason for keeping silent about the truth no longer exists. Mrs. Donahue has passed on, to the last being spared the horror of learning the real truth.

RETAIL BUREAU ENDS MEETING

The thirteenth annual conference of the Bureau of Retail Training, University of Pittsburgh, closed yesterday with a discussion of the trends in executive training. The conference was held in the William Penn Hotel.

Executives from a hundred leading department stores of the United States attended the two-day conference, at which experts spoke on the general theme of personnel administration.

Mrs. Grace Ely, of the retail bureau, presided at the meeting yesterday. Miss Emily Hopson and Miss Grace Kelly, of Milwaukee, spoke on the co-ordination of merchandise promotion and training.

Executive training was discussed at the morning session, with Gordon Grant, of the Pittsburgh bureau, presiding. Speakers were Miss Ruth Fagundus, of Baltimore, Miss Ruth Bloodworth, of Brooklyn, and Miss Caroline Spalding, of the Joseph Horne Co.

DEBS TRIBUTE TOMORROW

James Oneal, editor of the New Leader, national organ of the Socialist party, will be the principal speaker at a campaign meeting in Pitt Theater tomorrow at which the late Eugene V. Debs, leader of the party for many years, will be memorialized. Monday will be the fourth anniversary of Debs' death.

James H. Maurer, Socialist nominee for governor and former president of the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor, was expected in Pittsburgh today for a brief visit between trains.

Dr. William J. Van Essen, Socialist nominee for United States senator, said last night that Martin B. Leisser, Pittsburgh artist, would duplicate his life-size portrait of Debs for presentation to the Rand School of Social Science, New York City. The original was made shortly before the death of the Socialist leader.

Parents Sue City Over Fatal Accident

The City of Pittsburgh is asked to pay $50,000 damages for the death of Richard Pilkington in a suit filed in Common Pleas Court by his parents, Lawrence and Sophia Pilkington, of Sedgwick street, North Side.

They accuse the city of negligence in permitting the Shadeland Avenue Bridge over Woods Run, North Side, to fall into disrepair, with poor lighting. As a consequence, the suit averred, the son was killed October 27, 1929, when an automobile struck a hump in the paving, the shock hurling him through the rear of the car to the street, causing a fractured skull.

RUPTURE EXPERT HERE

E. J. Meinhardi, of Chicago, the well known Rupture Shield Expert, will personally be at the William Penn Hotel, Pittsburgh, Pa., on Tuesday and Wednesday, October 21st and 22nd, from 9 A. M. to 5:00 P. M. daily.

Mr. Meinhardi is highly recommended by thousands of satisfied customers. Take advantage of this opportunity to see him as he will not visit any other city in this section at this time. There is no charge for consultation and demonstration. This Appliance is for men only.

Mr. Meinhardi says:

The "Meinhardi Rupture Shield" not only retains the Rupture perfectly, but it also contracts the opening in ten days in the average case, regardless of the size or location of the rupture.

The "Meinhardi Rupture Shield" has no understraps. It is perfectly sanitary, practically indestructible, and may be worn while bathing.

Rupture often causes Stomach Trouble, Backache, Constipation, Nervousness, and other ailments which promptly disappear after the Rupture is properly retained. Thousands of deaths occurring annually from strangulated rupture can be avoided.

SPECIAL NOTICE—All customers that I have fitted here during the last ten years are invited to call for inspection for which there will be no charge. (Come in and talk with these customers regarding their experience with my Appliance.)

Please note the above dates and office hours carefully. (This visit is for white people only.)—E. J. Meinhardi, Home Office, 1551 N. Crawford Ave., Chicago.

INJURY JINX HITS ALL PITT WINGMEN

Paul Collins.

STRANGELY ENOUGH, THE department of the Pitt football team that has given Coach Sutherland more trouble than any other this season is the one about which he felt most secure when the campaign began. The end jobs have been a source of almost continuous worry, after once promising to leave nothing to be desired. From the happy situation of being overly-supplied with first-class material for the terminal posts, the Panther mentor was plunged into such a plight that he found himself forced to go into the Syracuse game with only one front-rank wingman able to play, and that one, Paul Collins, by no means at his best.

It was a heavy loss to the Pitt team, as it would have been to any eleven in the country, to be deprived of the services of the all America star, Joe Donchess, through graduation. But Sutherland still had in Collins a regular of 1929 holding over for the other end, and he solved the problem by shifting Jim MacMurdo from tackle to the wing berth vacated by Donchess. Then, when Eddie Hirshberg came through in such brilliant style as to crowd Collins for a regular ranking Pitt appeared to be one team that would have no occasion to worry about end play.

DEVELOPMENTS CHANGED ALL that, however. Not that any of the terminal specialists failed to live up to early promise, but because an unusual run of injuries in the first two games of the schedule put all three crack ends out of commission. Collins was hurt in the first game against Waynesburg as a starter, but the Panthers were still sitting pretty, with MacMurdo and Hirshberg on the job.

In the second game against West Virginia, however, both of these players were injured to such an extent that they have been out of action ever since and Collins had to go back to work before he was fit. Never has one branch of a Pitt team been hit harder by an injury jinx. Sutherland can only hope that the passing of another week will give him two sound men for the wings next Saturday before the running attack of Notre Dame is unleashed at the Stadium.

SPEAKING OF ONE position's being repeatedly hit by a persistent jinx in football, the same also applies sometimes to individual players. A notable victim in this respect has been Hank Bruder, star back of Northwestern University and one of best in America.

Hank Bruder.

In one season an injured hip put Bruder on the shelf for a long period, in another a broken leg put him out of commission altogether, and this year, just when he had managed to get going in his right stride, an attack of smallpox laid him low. Northwestern had shaped up as one of the best two teams in the Western Conference, but with Bruder lost its chances are sorely damaged.

AN AMATEUR BOXING tournament for the championships of Western Pennsylvania in eight classes, and running through a period of five weeks, with one show being staged each week, except the week including Thanksgiving Day, is to be held under the auspices of the McKeesport Athletic Club at the Palisades rink in that city. It will be held under the rules and sanction of the Allegheny Mountain Association of the A. A. U., and will be open to all registered members of that organization. A belt emblematic of the championship will be awarded to the winner in each class. All four shows will be held on Thursday nights, divided as follows: November 6, preliminaries in the 112, 126, 147 and 175-pound classes; November 13, preliminaries in the 118, 135 and 160-pound and heavyweight classes; November 20, semi-finals, and December 4, finals. Entries close November 1 with John T. Taylor, Pittsburgh, or James F. McGirr, McKeesport.

WHAT MAY LOOK to be a bad break for a young player in baseball occasionally proves to be a most fortunate turn of fate. There's Jim Moore, the rookie outfielder, for example. The Chicago White Sox had him when the 1930 season opened, but it was decided that he could not make the major league grade and he was shipped back to Dallas in the Texas League.

Moore was disappointed at his failure in the big show and bemoaned his ill luck, but he didn't know what was coming. The Philadelphia Athletics later needed an outfielder, bought Moore from Dallas, and the result was that Jim came back to the American League, landed on a pennant winner, and for the small part he played in the World Series drew down an extra check for $5,038.

EVIDENTLY IT OCCURRED to President Emil E. Fuchs, of the Boston Braves, that his action in letting such a valuable pitcher as Bob Smith get away called for some explanation, so he issued a statement to the Boston fans saying that the deal had been made to obtain batting strength.

Fuchs says that as a mark of his appreciation of Smith's past faithful performances he will assure Bobby that when his pitching days are over there will be a place for him on the Boston club. Selling a first-class pitcher while he is still good and promising to bring him back as a coach or something else when he is done is a novel idea of building up a winning ball club. It's a swell lot of consolation for Hub fans to be assured that Smith will return when he can't pitch any more.

Emil E. Fuchs.

SOME QUERIES IN the mail: J. M. inquires as to the pitching records of Burleigh Grimes and Percy Jones for 1930. Grimes won 3 games and lost 5 for the Braves, and won 13 and lost 5 for the Cardinals, total record won 16 and lost 10; Jones won none and lost one for the Pirates, and won 6 and lost 7 for Columbus, total record won 6 and lost 8. J. L. asks who starred for Carnegie Tech and if Bill Donohue played when the Tartan beat Notre Dame, 19 to 0, in 1926. Donohue played and the outstanding stars for Carnegie were Howard Harpster at quarterback and Lloyd Yoder at tackle. "Reader" asks if there is a difference in riding weights of the jockeys in the Kentucky Derby and what weight the horses carried in the last derby. Colts and geldings in the derby must carry 126 pounds and fillies 121 pounds. H. E. H., of State College asks what position Gordon Locke played on Iowa's football team. He played fullback. C. C., of South Fork, is in doubt as to whether the freshman rule is in force at Pitt and wants to know whether Jim MacMurdo played as a freshman or a sophomore last year. A student must be at least a sophomore to play on a Pitt varsity team, and it was as a sophomore that MacMurdo played football in 1929.

ONE DIAMOND VETERAN who has no fault to find with night baseball after figuring in a thorough trial of it is Wilbur Cooper, former star southpaw pitcher of the Pirates, just returned to Pittsburgh to begin work for the off-season in a new business connection with Allegheny County Memorial Park, with headquarters in the Law and Finance Building.

"I played in many night games in the Texas League as pitcher, first baseman or outfielder," said Cooper, "and the changed conditions never gave me the slightest trouble. In fact, I rather like night baseball. I think it is a great thing for the sport in the minor leagues. It was a huge success in the Texas League and large increases in attendance were reported from every city in which it was played."

SYRACUSE, Oct. 18.—Two undefeated and unscored-upon elevens, each boasting a powerful line and a punch in the backfield, will clash before 30,000 fans in the Archbold Stadium here this afternoon.

They are the varsity football teams of the University of Pittsburgh and Syracuse University, rivals for the tenth time since 1916. Pitt enters the fray a 10-7 favorite in the betting, which is plentiful, but it is admitted that almost anything may happen and a victory for the Orange would not come in the nature of a great surprise.

Syracuse this fall boasts its strongest team in years, one with a new and popular coach in Vic Hanson, former Orange all-round star, and up here they think this to be a Salt City year. They welcome the invasion of Pitt under the circumstances, for they are anxious to atone in a measure for the five defeats they have suffered at the hands of Pitt elevens, while winning only two games and tieing two others.

PITT IN FIGHTING MOOD

Pitt, on the other hand, this season has its smallest squad in years, boasting less than three full teams in all, and no less than a half dozen of these men are incapacitated. While taking care of today's game, Coach Sutherland at the same time must keep one eye on the meeting with Notre Dame at the Stadium in Pittsburgh next Saturday.

The Panthers by no means are conceding defeat. They are in a fighting mood. They realize they are in a tight spot, but they are prepared to make a great bid for the laurel wreath of victory.

Following a light workout at Shore Acres, 15 miles out of town, where the Panthers stopped overnight, Coach Jock Sutherland yesterday gave expression to his doubts regarding the battle at hand. He knows full well of the vaunted strength of the Syracuse line and of the menace that lies in the presence of Warren Stevens, a triple threat star in the locals' backfield, and also that Syracuse lost only two regulars from last year's star varsity team and has three stars from last year's powerful, undefeated freshman squad now starring in its ranks in Joe Moran, halfback; Dick Fishel, fullback, and Lombardi, left guard. The freshman team of last fall defeated the freshmen of Colgate University, always Syracuse's greatest rival, 52-0. Among those who watched the Panthers work yesterday was Lloyd Jordan, former Pitt end star. He will be on hand today to scout the Orange for Colgate. He now is an assistant to head Coach Andy Kerr and also is varsity basketball mentor. Jordan predicted a tough battle for Pitt.

SYRACUSE ON EDGE

Syracuse will be prepared to give its all in today's game, with a letdown contest against St. Lawrence facing it next week, while Pitt must look ahead to that tussle with Notre Dame next week. The chances are that Capt. Eddie Baker, Pitt quarterback, will be a marked man today. The Orange has heard about his triple-threat potentialities this fall, and believes that if it succeeds in stopping him it will take a long step toward upsetting the dope and turning in a victory.

Coach Sutherland, of Pitt, was hoping for a clear, cool day. Rain fell late yesterday, and the weather became chilly. A heavy field will aid the heavier Syracuse line. On the other hand, humid weather would prove enervating to the players, and call for many substitutions, and Sutherland will Duquesne's Night Riders galloped hard, but spottily, over rain-softened turf at Forbes Field last evening, and fought to the limit to rip off a 14-9 triumph over Howard College, of Birmingham, Ala. Billed as an intersectional battle, the contest lived up in every respect to the spectacular implications of the term and the 6,000 fans who sat through the tussle jostled from the ballyard firm in the conviction that they had beheld the fanciest gridiron spectacle that the local campaign has produced to date this autumn.

The impression had oozed abroad somehow before the contest that the Southerners were to be a set-up for the cantering Bluffites, and this widespread misinformation, plus late afternoon rains that signed off a couple of hours before the kickoff, hewed down the proportions of the crowd. But the doughty invading host, flashing a splendid runhefty and well-drilled unit, figures to outrank Notre Dame's forward wall. The Tartan backfield, better stocked with reserves, possessing speed and finesse in Quarterback Harry McCurdy and Halfbacks Kavel, Graveno, Armentrout, Eyth and Flanagan, and crushing, battering power in two crackerjack fullbacks, Johnny Karcis and Joe Morbito, is every bit the equal of Notre Dame's Carideo-Brill - Mullins - Savoldi-Schwartz - Koken - O'Connor and Jaskwich combine.

Carnegie's varied attack, constructed so as to take fullest advantage of the slightest lapse of alertness on the part of the enemy; with a dangerous and well-laid aerial game and more than a little power on off and inside tackle drives will test to the very limit the endurance, class, and wide-awakeness of Rockne's not-to-be-slighted system of defense.

STRONG LINES

The game likely will be decided in the line, where Carnegie possesses a distinct edge. Notre Dame's first line of defense is no setup, naturally, but with stars of the caliber of Monyihan, Cannon and Twomey of last year's team missing, it is doubted if it possesses the strength to turn aside Carnegie's challenge.

Rockne has brought his team to a high peak as far as morale and spirit is concerned, but it's going to take more than spirit to offset the poundings and slashes of Karcis and Morbito and the hard and clever running halfbacks have in store.

The starting lineups will not be known definitely much before game-time. Rockne, as usual, figures to send in his second string eleven at the start. Judge Steffen and Bob Waddell are considering using somewhat of a shock troop battle front themselves at first, although they won't use an entire reserve eleven.

OUT TO SCORE FIRST

It is hardly likely that Carnegie will do much feeling out of the Rockne strength. Rather, the Skibos may be counted on to go

IRISH READY, KNUTE SAYS

Staff Correspondent.

"Carnegie Tech has a great team," said Rockne, "and we realize that we have a stupendous task ahead of us if we are to beat them today. They have a flashy attack, one hard to fathom, and boast a powerful line.

"Notre Dame is ready; the boys are prepared to fight to the very last ditch and we have a few surprises in store ourselves. The team that wins today is going to need the breaks, and, what is more, must be prepared to take instantaneous advantage of them when they present themselves."

WADDELL CONFIDENT.

Coach Waddell has a world of confidence in his line and in Quarterback Harry McCurdy.

"I know we are in for a great ball game, but I also know we are ready. McCurdy looks the part of a great quarterback, and I think he'll surprise Notre Dame today. Our line is big and strong and is ready to go. Rockne isn't going to keep those shock troops in there very long."

Judge Wally Steffen, who joined the Tech team at Elkhart yesterday, also expressed himself as being entirely pleased with the condition of the team. He warned his players that Notre Dame must not be taken lightly.

"Our team has a world of confidence," Judge Steffen

MISS COLLETT AFTER FIFTH NATIONAL TITLE

GLENNA MEETS MISS VAN WIE IN FINAL

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 18.—(AP.)—Peerless match play golfer and coolest of them all when under fire, Glenna Collett, New York City, moved one step nearer her objective—a fifth women's national championship—yesterday with a smashing 5-and-3 victory over Helen Hicks, 19-year-old Inwood, N. Y., star, in the semi-finals of the national classic.

Defender of her title and favorite of the crowd, Miss Collett will face Virginia Van Wie, Chicago miss, today, in the 36-hole final round. Miss Van Wie fought her way to the last bracket with a 2-and-1 victory over Mrs. O. S. Hill, of Kansas City, tournament medalist.

2,000 SEE TILT

While a gallery of nearly 2,000 persons thrilled to her long tee shots, and well executed approaches, Miss Collett strode over the rolling fairways of this difficult layout to post 38, one under par, for the first nine. She finished with a swarm of birdies that had her four under standard figures when the match ended on the fifteenth.

Miss Hicks, most brilliant of the younger luminaries and concededly the longest driver of the women's ranks, found herself in the unusual position of taking second to Miss Collett in shots from the tee. Outdriven by many yards most of the time, the Inwood girl was continually pressing—she played more second shots out of the rough than is usually the case. She had a 42 for the first nine. From the first hole to the last, Miss Collett was superior.

VICTOR STEADY

Neither Mrs. Hill nor Miss Van Wie exhibited remarkable golf, but the latter was steadier. Usually a fine short-game player, Miss Hill was either weak or strong with her irons. The match was close all the way, with Miss Van Wie holding a 2 up lead at the turn.

Today's meeting will be the second of Miss Collett and Miss Van Wie in the National final. Two years ago Miss Collett won the title with an overwhelming 13-12 victory over the Chicago girl.

IRISH READY, KNUTE SAYS

stated," and what is more, has the stuff to back it up. I'm not underestimating Rockne or his team, but I'm certain that Carnegie will hand them their first defeat today."

The Tipoff

Luby Dimeolo, last year's captain at Pitt and now assistant coach to Chick Meehan, at New York University, here for the purpose of scouting Carnegie, is of the opinion that both Tech and Pitt will beat Notre Dame. It is Luby's contention the hard-charging, rugged lines boasted by the Pittsburgh elevens will prove too much for the Irish.

Although today's game does not figure to be a sellout, South Bend is jammed to the guards with football fans. It has been difficult to get hotel accommodations for the past two days, the number being swelled this morning as the special trains from Pittsburgh unloaded their horde of Steel City fans.

ODDS DROP

Carnegie's Kiltie Band, famous as a collegiate musical organization, one of the most colorful in the country, arrived this morning, and, after parading to the Hotel Oliver, added to the zip and excitement by giving a concert in the hotel lobby.

Betting odds, reported early in the week to favor Notre Dame at odds of 8 to 5, were paired down with the arrival of the Tartans on the scene of battle and the reports of injuries to Mullins and Leahy, of Notre Dame, to even money.

Joe Morbito, Tech's Italian fullback, and Joe Savoldi, of Notre Dame, another son of Italy, are expected to furnish some fireworks today. Last year, Savoldi made a remark to Morbito in the game in Pittsburgh that got under the Tech star's skin.

"Wait till I see that bird today," Joe said. "I'll teach him to call me a Wop."

He then demonstrated the black-hand death sign he intends to give Mr. Savoldi today.

The music of battle may be stilled as the final gun cracks today, but you can bet the melody will linger on.

KOZAK PLAYS TURNESA

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Oct. 18.—(AP.)—Walter Kozak, 21-year-old defending champion from Douglaston, N. Y., and Joe Turnesa, veteran Elmsford player, again fought their way into the final of the Metropolitan Professional Golfers' Association championship tournament yesterday. They will meet in the 36-hole final today over the Dedney Farms Country Club course.

Former Rankin Lad May Star For Syracuse

Staff Correspondent.

SYRACUSE, Oct. 18.—One of the players who may star against the Pitt eleven for Syracuse University here this afternoon is a Pittsburgh district lad, Michael Korch, formerly of Rankin High School. He is the first-string substitute quarterback.

Michael is a brother of Joe Korch, former Rankin boxer. He is 5 feet 8 inches tall, and weighs 175 pounds. He starred last year as a quarterback and halfback on the undefeated Orange freshman eleven.

DETROIT BEATS W. VA., 23-0

DETROIT, Oct. 18.—(AP.)—University of Detroit's Titans stopped short the West Virginia Mountaineers' line plunges last night and scored three touchdowns and a field goal to win by 23-to-0 and continue their season's string of decisive victories.

Only once did the Mountaineers, who had held Pittsburgh to 16 points earlier in the season, threaten seriously to score. Then Sebulsky, quarter, intercepted one of O'Neill's passes in the final period and ran 40 yards to the Titan 15-yard line. O'Neill knocked down Bartug's pass over the goal line and the danger was averted. The ball was in West Virginia territory most of the game. The lineup:

ST. VINCENT'S STARS HURT

LATROBE, Pa., Oct. 18.—Injuries, coming on the eve of the Canisius game, have almost wrecked the chances of the Bearcat squad for victory in Sunday's game in Buffalo.

Captain Evancho and Martak, regular halfbacks, both received shoulder injuries in yesterday's scrimmage session, the latter's shoulder being broken, thus putting the Bearcats' star kicker and passer out of commission for the remainder of the season. There is some question about Evancho's shoulder, though it may turn out to be broken. Kirchner injured in last Saturday's game, is still out of the lineup, thus making four regulars who are out, Zappone being hurt in the first game of the season at Geneva.

Madge Gets Win Over Joe Trippe

ERIE, Pa., Oct. 18.—Joe Trippe, Rochester, N. Y., welterweight, was robbed of a decision over Larry Madge, of Cleveland, here last night when the judges disagreed and Referee Leo Finneran cast his vote in favor of the Clevelander. It was the 10-round main event.

owner, John D. Hertz, of Chicago, when he captured the Kentucky Derby, the Lawrence Realization, the Jockey Club Gold Cup, the Saratoga Cup and other stakes in his title season.

Hertz decided that Reigh Count was entitled to a life of ease and luxury as a reward after his retirement, so he has provided for the horse a $50,000 six-room bungalow, trimmed with oak, brass and tile, and having special window glass to let in the sun's ultra-violet rays.

Dazzy Vance.

WHEN HE WAS in the National League, Joe McCarthy never admitted that there were any other pitcher in the circuit better than his own, but now that he has gone over to the American League he can speak his mind more freely. He gives Dazzy Vance, of the Robins, No. 1 ranking among the Heydler hurlers for 1930. "In my opinion Vance was the best right-hander in the league," McCarthy says. "He did not win more games than some others, but he had more stuff. He's a great pitcher, make no mistake about that. Haines and Kremer also stood and when he got started Grimes was one of the best. Malone was good in spots, and so was Root. Vance, however, was the best of the lot. I think Hallahan, of the Cardinals, was the best left-hander." McCarthy picks the A's as the club he will have to beat next season and thinks the Yanks outclass them in several respects. "I would not trade the Yankee infield for Connie Mack's," he says. "Simmons is the best outfielder on the A's, but you wouldn't trade Babe Ruth for him, would you? I guess not. Grove and Earnshaw represent nearly all of Mack's pitching power. I hope to have a better balanced and more formidable staff of pitchers on the job at the Yankee Stadium next year than Mack has in Philadelphia."

ning attack and a constant aerial threat, accomplished not a little toward wiping out the adverse impression of sub-Mason-and-Dixon football spread by the rather sorry George-Tech aggregation here a week ago.

FOURTH VICTORY

'Twas the fourth consecutive victory for the Dukes since their 7-0 setback at the hands of West Virginia in the opener and 'twas only the second conflict in a row in which the Hillmen have been forced to hurtle up from the rear to shag the decision, Loyola having made pace for the Red and Blue throughout quite a portion of the joust between the Celtic rivals in Chicago last Friday night. But the Howard warriors were a far snappier, scrappier combine than was Loyola and the North-South seance, though drawn along vaguely similar lines, was vastly more thrill-laden than was the Windy City affair.

The Pittsburghers opened the tallying shortly before the end of frame one. A fumble by Halfback Clark was recovered on the Howard 24 mark by Venneri, rangy Bluff tackle. Four plays netted just that many yards for the home troop and Howard snared the oval on downs on her own 20-yard line. Then, on second down, Clark obligingly baubled the apple again and once more the alert Venneri swooped upon it, this time precisely 14 yards from the goal.

Four line thrusts left the Dukes still a yard short of first down and Howard took the ball on her own fifth parallel. Here on second down Quarterback Levvy unleashed a first rate punt. Bud Devinney was under it on the Howard 38 and, sprinting down the left side line, was nearly in the clear till a brace of Alabamans rapped him so smartly as he entered the 10-yard zone that the spheroid bounded from his grasp, rolled over the goal line, and was there bumped about by various eager adherents of both banners till Red Murphy, Hill terminal, corralled it for a touchdown. Devinney's placement for the added point smacked the cross-bar—and bounded over.

Howard hustled back strongly in stanza two. No one had been getting much of anywhere, when suddenly Sweeney, who had replaced Levvy at the Howard quarter post, laid a quick punt dead on the Duke fourth stripe, Goodwin, a clever end, downing the ball. McCarthy failed to cop a sneak at center and on the ensuing play, Abele was called back to kick. But the Duke line opened badly and the redoubtable Goodwin was through in a flash and climbing onto Abele's brogan. The pigskin rebounded with resounding thud and the next instant, Gordon Garrett, who had replaced his injured brother, Wheeler, in the Howard forward wall, was panting on the pellet deep in the end area—so deep, indeed, that the Dixie boy plastered his skull against the goal post and arose not until he had been accorded quite some attention by the trainer. Bondurant, husky fullback, was wide to starboard on his placement try for the extra notch, and Duquesne went into the closing half with a 7-6 advantage, but not before further local trepidation had been caused by a second Goodwin punt-block effort, this time Red Sullivan, third field general, a stern Bluff stand on the Steel City 14 averting disaster.

But the ever-ambitious Birmingham contingent was not to be denied and bagged a field goal to assume 9-7 lead early in session three. A 28-yard jaunt off left by Trambley gave the Dukes first down on their own 41 mark a moment after the kick-off. A pass over center, Benedict to Trambley was grounded, whereupon Devinney tossed one that Clark stepped in the way of, hauled down, and bore with great glee 40 yards to the Duke eight-yard line. Kovalcheck smeared Estes for a minus three at right end. Howard was guilty of holding on the attempt and landed a 15-yard penalty that left them on the 25 mark. Sweeney picked up four at right end. Bondurant fumbled and recovered, but for a three-yard deficit. On third down, with 24 to travel, Sweeney executed a pretty heave over midline to Estes, who Devinney downed frantically on the Bluffite four. Still well shy of the final chalk-strip, Howard wisely elected to try placement for goal and Bondurant, with Sweeney planting the ball, neatly propelled a three-pointer between the uprights from about a dozen yards out.

DUKES REGAIN LEAD

Not till the concluding canto were the Dukes able to eradicate the Howard gain thus obtained. It was Trambley, outstanding luminary of the Night Riding backfield of the occasion, who prepared the stage. A long Sweeney toss over the goal line slipped the Bluffmen the oval on their own 20 toward the terminus of inning three. Cutting fast through left tackle, Trambley shook loose into the open, bore to the right, and was run down from behind by Hargrove and Davis, after lugging the leather 63 yards to the Howard 17 mark.

Three line plays netted as many yards, whereupon Benedict took to the air. His short flip was intercepted by the wide-ranging Davis, a truly brilliant center, and the Howard star twinkled two yards from his own eight to the 10, where he was vigorously dumped. Sweeney failed on a right end excursion, then punted out to Devinney on the Howard 43. Bud gathered in the ball, whirled down the left 19 yards, and went out of bounds on the 24 stripe.

A double pass, forward pass, Trambley to Benedict to Abele, rated 20 yards over center for first down on the four-yard mark as the period wound up. Kovalcheck, dashing Duke fullback, knifed midline for better than three on the initial play of the ultimate quarter. On the following scrimmage he ploughed over, only to be called back as both teams merged offside. But there was no flubbing the next one, Kass diving high over the pile-up for the counter. Then, still unsatisfied, he collaborated with Devinney to propel the spheroid over the cross-bar for the gravy point and the last talley of the soiree.

The Dukes, with the inspired Trambley bearing the flag, displayed bits of real offensive form. Their passing was indifferent, however, and they are still the squad that gets genuinely serious only in direst pinches.

Their line loosened distressingly at several stages of the second half, when apprehension over the hurling potentialities of Sweeney tended to pull the secondary defense backward.

In Sweeney, Bullard, Estes and Clark, Howard boasted a flock of speedy pellet-carriers. Sweeney is an exceedingly strong-armed passer and is one of those driving youngsters who'd look good in any old backfield. Capt. Hargrove and Goodwin shone at the wings, while Davis constituted himself a committee of one to disseminate bad news in the Layden camp and proceeded to fulfill the contract throughout the engagement.

Tech-Notre Dame Game Broadcast

Thousands of football fans throughout the Tri-State area probably will stay close to the radio this afternoon to hear the broadcast of the Carnegie Tech and Notre Dame game at South Bend, Ind., being offered by WJAS through the scourtesy of the Frank & Sedar Co.

The broadcast will begin promptly at 3 o'clock with pregame highlights followed by a complete play-by-play account.

Francis Owen, of the WJAS staff, will give the detailed description.

ALLEN BEATTY BOWS

FRANKLIN, Pa., Oct. 18.—(AP.)—Freddie Fitzgerald, 143½, Youngstown won a 10-round decision over Allen (Tarzan) Beatty, 145½, McKeesport Negro, here last night. Roger Brooks, 142, Cleveland, was given a verdict in six rounds over Joe Latona, 147, Buffalo. Joey Boler, 126, Erie, won a six-round decision over Andy Tomosky, 126¼, Pittsburgh. Charles Solomon, 142, Erie, defeated Elzie Mott, 137, Franklin, in four rounds.

SKIBOS PRIMED FOR IRISH

out and try to get 'em early. He who lands the first punch—well, you know the rest, especially if you happen ever to have been socked first.

The Skibos spent yesterday in Elkhart, Ind., a score of miles outside South Bend where they staged their final drill. A light fall of snow late in the afternoon and a cold and penetrating wind greeted the Tartans on their arrival here. Rockne sent his Irish through a long drill at Cartier Field as he made a final endeavor to iron out some of the weak spots that have cropped up in both the offense and defense during the week.

Notre Dame may have to battle Tech minus the services of two star members of its cast. Moon Mullins, veteran fullback, and Leahy, a tackle star, are on the list of those hors de combat, and it is questionable whether or not they'll be able to go today.

50,000 MAY ATTEND

Carnegie moved its squad to the scene of battle here shortly before noon. The Tartans are in fine physical trim, having come out of their early games with hardly an injury, at least of serious nature.

A crowd that is expected to number between 40,000 and 50,000 will view the contest.

The game will be broadcast to Pittsburgh followers unable to make the jaunt here over Station WJAS. Early this morning the special trains bearing the Pittsburgh fan contingent rumbled into South Bend, and the Pittsburgh delegation did more than that into the various hotel lobbies and gathering places. Rumble, in fact, was hardly the word for it.

have to husband his reserves as much as possible.

Thirteen thousand temporary seats have been installed in the Archbold Stadium for the game, to round out the capacity to 30,000, and it is believed a sell-out crowd will be on hand.

George (Hooks) Wiltse, former pitcher and first baseman of the New York Giants in their championship days, now a realtor here and a close personal friend of Fred Turbyville, Pitt publicity director, took the visiting scribes and T. P. Leslie, passenger agent of the P. & L. E. Railroad, in tow upon their arrival and drove them in his car to and from the country quarters of the Panthers.

Kickoff today will be at 2:30 o'clock, which means that the game will be finished in the gloaming, as it gets dark here very early these days.

EDINBORO VICTOR

CHARLEROI, Pa., Oct. 18.—In a well-played and hard-fought game, the Edinboro Teachers College defeated California Teachers College, 18 to 0, before a crowd of 3,000 yesterday. The lineup:

California—0.		Edinboro—18.
Krupensky	L.E.	Jolly
Drum	L.T.	Duff
Malt	L.G.	Malcolmson
Bielski	C.	McVitty
Manon	R.G.	Benninghoff
Underwood	R.T.	Christie
Hall	R.E.	A. Arrowsmith
Smith	Q.	Anderson
Salsi	L.H.	Roney
Peters	R.H.	Harvey
Matheus	F.	Massa

Score by periods:

Edinboro Teachers	0	0	12	6—18

Substitutions—California, Pata for Hall, Kent for Smith, Zoretic for Salsi. Edinboro—Bennett for Malcolmson, Watson for McVitty, H. Arrowsmith for Harvey, Smith for Benninghoff, Reitz for Massa, Wallin for Reitz, Daly for Christy, Davis for Duff. Touchdowns—Anderson 2, Massa 1. Referee—Doc Smith, W. & J. Umpire—Barron, Grove City. Linesman — Luffy, Grove City.

LOTT TAKES TITLE

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, Oct. 18.—(AP.)—George M. Lott, Jr. Davis Cup player, defeated Dr. P. M. Hawk, New York, in the final of the Greenbrier autumn tennis tournament here yesterday. The score was 6-1, 6-3, 6-2.

LOYOLA SOUTH COPS

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 18.—(AP.)—Loyola of the South's fast driving backs last night plowed with ease through the Loyola of Chicago's courageous, but inadequate defenses and routed the Northerners, 25 to 0.

CHAMBERS WINS OVER BRENT AT MOOSE

By JAMES MILLER.

George Chambers, East Liberty miller, who would not let a little thing like a cut right eye, which bled profusely for four rounds, crimp his style, upset the dope by winning over Billy Brent, Hill district Negro, in the 10-round top bout of a double windup at the Moose Temple, downtown, last night.

Brent was a sure-shot to win, according to pre-fight information by virtue of his knockout victory over Mickey Solomen in the same ring a few weeks ago, but in Chambers he found an opponent who disregarded his stinging rights and left hooks, and sailed on to an unexpected win.

The bout was without a knockdown, but the lively mixing from round to round kept the crowd on edge. Chambers received a bad cut over his right optic in the first round from a butt. Brent weighed 154¼ pounds and Chambers came in the same weight.

EDWARDS VICTOR

In the other half of the bargain bill, Freddie Edwards, of Chester, W. Va., after being floored in the first and second rounds for counts of eight, came on to defeat Cowboy DeLuca, of Lawrenceville.

A sharp right dropped the West Virginia fighter in the opening round, but he regained his bearings to come back to drop DeLuca for no-count as the bell rang in the same stanza. Another punch of the same variety floored Edwards for eight in the next round and once again he came back and stood off DeLuca with his bulling tactics.

After these knockdowns, Edwards fought back with renewed vigor and gave the Cowboy a bad lacing about the body. It was a nip-and-tuck affair for the better half of the bout, but Edwards came back strong in the last four rounds to merit the decision.

It was just another time the Cowboy lost his courage and the fine boxing points he owns. DeLuca weighed 147¾, just a quarter of a pound more than Edwards.

LAWRENCE BEATEN

Billy (Muscle) Scholes, the North Side milkman, won from Joey Lawrence, rugged Dayton, O., fighter, in the second six-round bout. Scholes tipped the beam at 134 pounds, while Lawrence came in a 131¾.

In the opening bout, Chuck Woods, of Sharon, outboxed Jimmy Thomas, Negro, of the Hill. Woods held a weight advantage of five and one-quarter pounds on Thomas, coming in at 124¾ pounds, along with height and reach.

Red Robinson refereed all of the fights, with Frank Brown, Frank Ferris and Al Grayber acting as judges. Grayber relieved Ferris from duty in the fourth round of the main go, in order to permit Ferris time to catch his train to see Notre Dame and Carnegie Tech battle at South Bend today. Tommy Grant and Max Zuegschmidt were the timers. Ray Eberle did the announcing and Dr. M. R. Goldman was the commission physician.

Apples Meyers announced that Harry Harris, of Bellaire, O., a local favorite, will do battle with Tiger Joe West, of Donora, in the main bout next Friday night at the Moose.

Between Rounds

Jack (Buck) McTiernan, Swissvale junior-middleweight, is reported to be in great shape for his bout with Bucky Lawless at Motor Square Garden Monday night. McTiernan's handlers say that Buck went seven rounds in the gym yesterday and appears to be very fast and his punching is much harder. Lawless arrived in town this morning and will work out at the Garden gym this afternoon.

Johnny Deutsch wishes to dispel rumors to the effect that Jackie Rodgers, Negro featherweight star, who is just out of the hospital following an eye injury, has signed with Red Meson, as reported in a local newspaper. Deutsch has a contract to prove he is the manager of Rodgers.

TO DEDICATE COUNTY LINKS

By VERN SWARTSFAGER.

A crowd of several thousand Allegheny County golfers is expected to be on hand at the first tee of the new golf links in the South Park between 1 and 2 o'clock this afternoon when the County Commissioners formally open the layout which has been under construction for several years, and much heralded.

Commissioner Babcock will be host for the official party at a "hot dog" party in Speading Oak Grove at 1 o'clock, after which it will proceed, via automobile parade, to inspect other sections of the park before winding up at the first tee, where the chairman of county commissioners, Joseph G. Armstrong, will dedicate the links to the people of Allegheny County. Commissioner C. C. McGovern also will be on hand.

There will be no charge for Saturday and Sunday play for the next month, when the course will be closed again. The purpose of the commissioners in opening it at this time is to permit enthusiastic golfers to inspect their new camping grounds.

CATHOLICS PLAY TODAY

Dick Schradings' Central Catholic High School gridders and Johnstown Catholic High play on the Duquesne University gridiron this afternoon. The kickoff will be at 2:30.

TITANS PLAY GROVERS

TRIO OF LOCAL FROSH TEAMS IN ACTION

Topped by the Westminster-Grove City game at Grove City and well supported by a host of other colorful struggles, tri-state district collegiate football affords district fans a full menu today.

Geneva and Waynesburg will meet in a Tri-State Conference battle tonight at Reeves Field, Beaver Falls. The game originally was scheduled for last night, but when the cold rain of yesterday swept over the stadium with apparently no idea of letting up, Director of Athletics Edgecombe arranged with the Waynesburg management to postpone it until tonight, when it is hoped the weather will at least be dry.

Local competition will be afforded by the Pitt, Tech and Duquesne freshman elevens. The Panther and Tartan frosh meet in the Stadium at 2:30 in the afternoon, and in the evening, under the lights at Forbes Field, Duquesne's yearlings engage the Notre Dame "B" team.

LOCAL TEAMS AWAY

Pitt and Carnegie Tech are playing on foreign fields in struggles of national importance. The Tartans clash with Notre Dame at South Bend and Pitt is in Syracuse for a struggle with the Orange.

Wash-Jeff, smarting under the sting of the tie at Wittenberg last week, faces a strong Temple University team in Philadelphia. Temple upset the dope a week ago by knocking off Bucknell's highly touted team, which was one of the favorites for the Eastern title. The Philadelphians got away to a slow start, but appear to have struck their stride and are choices over the Presidents today.

Penn State and Lafayette meet at Easton in their annual classic. Lafayette was thoroughly routed by Colgate last week, but Herb McCracken has labored all week to correct many of the faults that cropped up in this battle, and will give Bob Higgins and his undefeated Nittany Lions a stiff argument this afternoon.

BUCKNELL CONFIDENT

Bucknell hopes to get started again at the expense of Jack Harding's St. Thomas eleven. Davis-Elkins is in the South for a game with Furman. West Virginia Wesleyan has a busy afternoon in store as it takes an Glenville State Teachers and Marshall and Bethany clash at Huntington, W. Va.

Thiel and Allegheny, rivals of ancient vintage, clash at Greenville with the result very much of a toss-up. Thiel has a strong team, although it has yet to win a game, while Allegheny has taken Westminster and Edinboro.

St. Francis and Slippery Rock have a date that will be well worth spying on at Slippery Rock.

Tomorrow, St. Vincent meets Canisus in a battle at Buffalo, N. Y.

SCHENLEY HIGH VICTOR, 34-0

Important City League and W. P. I. A. L. battles marked yesterday's scholastic grid warfare. Schenley High took over Allderdice, 34-0, and Oliver walloped Langley, 26 to 0.

Har-Brac beat Parnassus, 21-13; Jeannette topped Ford City, 13-6; Braddock won over Pitcairn, 12-6, and McKees Rocks blanked Coraopolis, 25-0. Mt. Lebanon whipped Edgewood, 20-0.

New Castle kept its slate clean by downing Woodward, 12-6; Monessen nosed out Trinity, 8-0; Carnegie blanked Bridgeville, 7-0; Dormont beat Crafton, 13-6; Oakmont won from Shady Side Academy, 12-6, and Stowe toppled Arnold Prep, 25-0.

The lineups for the City League teams:

MY FIFTY YEARS IN BASEBALL

By CONNIE MACK,

Manager, World Champion Philadelphia Athletics

INSTALLMENT NO. 36.

Connie Mack

The Athletics looked good at least one day in 1915. That was the afternoon the season opened, when Pennock shut out the Red Sox with one scratch hit.

This did not come until two men were out in the ninth and a slow bounding grounder that Lajoie really should have handled defrauded this brilliant portsider of entry into the Hall of Fame.

The season ended on opening day for the Athletics, for after that they played slovenly ball and soon sank to the tail end. The players were in the dumps and the atmosphere was decidedly depressing.

We were not getting anywhere, so I was constrained to make further sales before mid-season in 1915. I sold Shortstop Jack Barry and Pitcher Pennock to the Red Sox and also bartered Pitcher Bob Shawkey to New York.

This season was a total failure, due to the fact that the remaining players of past championship outfits felt keenly the loss of the stars who had departed and did not play the game of which they were capable.

It was this fact that impelled me to get rid of other players as the season went on. That year was a nightmare and I was glad when it ended. It was my first year as a tailender.

FRANK BAKER RETURNS

Before the season of 1916 started, J. Franklin Baker expressed a willingness to return to baseball, so I sold him, along with Oldring, to the New York team.

Baseball was at a low ebb in Philadelphia so far as the Athletics were concerned. I couldn't count the number of players I tried in 1916 and 1917. I acquired them in droves and fired them in droves.

It didn't seem as if I could get any lucky break. I fine-combed the minors and raided the colleges and yet could get few players who could help me.

The nadir of adversity was reached in 1918, the year of America's entry in the World War, for baseball in general was almost wrecked and it staggered through a shortened season with skeleton crews.

Many of the stars of the game jumped into a new kind of uniform, with the result that players who long since had passed their usefulness were reclaimed by major league clubs because they were not eligible for the current selective draft.

At the start of this season I let my last remaining veterans go but one when I traded Stuffy McInnis, Wally Schang and Joe Bush to the Red Sox for Third Baseman Larry Gardner, Pitcher Vean Gregg and Catcher Chet Thomas. Some cash came to us along with these players.

STRUNK LAST TO GO

I now had lost every one of my champions with the exception of Amos Strunk. The seasons of 1918 and 1919 were repetitions of the three previous years. We continued to finish at the bottom and fans were wondering how long this was going to last.

I might say that the blight of the World War from 1917 to the armistice had a tremendous adverse effect on all professional sports and that my building plans were halted in that time because nearly all of the young players were in a warrior's uniform or engaged in an essential industry. There really was nothing for me to do but to wait until conditions in America were normal again.

Before the season of 1920, I parted with my last remaining member of championship teams when I sold Strunk to the White Sox. With that transaction I finished selling players of known value. No good player has been sold by me for money since the Strunk deal.

A new era in baseball dawned in 1920. The Federal League war ended, the World War was a thing of the past and there now was an incentive to go out and build a team.

Baseball came back with surprising quickness and came back bigger than anybody expected. I always felt we would have recovered two or three years sooner had we started our rebuilding plans a bit earlier.

REBUILDING BEGINS

The new floodtide of baseball caught us napping and we still had a lot of work ahead to get out of the tailend class.

The pioneers of my present-day champions started to come into public view around this time. Jimmy Dykes, infielder, and Ralph Perkins, catcher, came to stay in 1919, after having had earlier trials and being sent to the minors for seasoning.

Then, in 1920, I had the good fortune to buy Ed Rommell from the Newark club. He reported that year a convalescent from a serious illness and did not give a sign of his real skill until 1921.

It was Rommell's wonderful pitching that pulled the Athletics out of last place in 1922 for the first time since 1914. He won 27 games and lost 13 that season with his famous knckle ball. That enabled us to finish seventh, which was progress, if nothing else.

In 1923 the Athletics for the first time in years paid out large sums for players. From Portland we bought Third Baseman Sammy Hale and Pitcher George Walberg and from Salt Lake City we purchased Paul Strand, an outfielder.

STRAND DISAPPOINTS

Both Hale and Walberg made good and today the latter is ranked as one of the mightiest sidewinders in the game.

All the great sum spent for Strand was lost. He turned out to be the biggest disappointment of my career. I had banked heavily on him and spent a fortune to acquire him.

In 1922 he led the Pacific Coast League in batting and not only that but broke the world record for the most base blows made during one season. His record still stands.

NIGHT SOCCER TILT CARDED

TODAY'S GAMES.

KEYSTONE LEAGUE.

Houston at Dunlevy, Charleroi Park (McArdle).

CENTRAL LEAGUE.

Crafton at Celtics.

Clan Douglas at Mesta Machine.

Union Switch at Pierpoint Motors.

Pittsburgh Rovers at Sons of St. George.

Dunlevy will stage another night football game at Charleroi Park tonight, with Houston providing the opposition for the upriver club. The fans are taking a liking to the night brand of soccer and large crowds are attending the games.

Four contests will be played in the Central League this afternoon. The outstanding game should be staged at Homewood playgrounds, where the Pierpoint Motors hook up with the Union Switch and Signal.

Crafton Heights meets the Green-clad Celtics at Leslie Park, and the Pittsburgh Rovers go to Mellon Field to play the Sons of St. George.

EDITH QUIER WINS

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Oct. 18.—(AP.)—Edith Quier, Reading, Pa., with a 35, led 11 national women golf stars in a nine-hole tournament sponsored yesterday by Harold Lloyd, film comedian, on his private pony course.

WILKINSBURG, WASHINGTON MEET TODAY

In a game that appears to possess all the requirements tending to make it a red-hot contest, Washington and Wilkinsburg clash, at Wilkinsburg. The Wilkinsburgers rolled up a tremendous score on Evans City last week, winning by a score of 133 to 0, but it may be predicted with extreme safety that such will not be the case against Washington.

Hank Day has been turning out crackerjack football teams, at Washington, for many years, and he'll be very anxious to lower the colors of Elmer Carroll's prides.

Scott High, under the shrewd tutelage of Johnny Reed, faces Peabody, at North Braddock. Perry and Turtle Creek Union meet, at Turtle Creek, where Foxy Miller has developed another strong machine. Charleroi has Clairton to contend with, at Clairton. Hurst and Greensburg battle, at Greensburg. This game also promises much in the way of thrills, and is one of the feature clashes of the day.

Down the Beaver Valley, where Midland and Beaver Falls are scrapping for the championship, the two leaders meet. Midland has compiled a fine record, and will invade Beaver Fall an even choice to tear down Heckathorn's warriors.

SUAREZ BEATS KID KAPLAN

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—(AP.)—Justo Suarez, South America's bid for lightweight fame and glory, passed another hurdle last night along the road to a championship match with Al Singer. The aggressive Argentine won the decision from Louis (Kid) Kaplan after 10 rounds of desultory milling, but the show failed to please a crowd of 11,000 in Madison Square Garden.

The short-armed Kaplan made a gallant fight of it, pressing the black-thatched South American in the early rounds as no one else has been able to do in four previous matches here. He baffled Suarez by sticking to him like a bumblebee, annoying him with his bobbing and weaving and short, sneak punches that usually wound up colliding with Justo's short ribs or long chin.

The battle was waged almost entirely at close quarters, a tiresome sort of milling that appealed little to the crowd. Once Kaplan had shot his major bolt by winning the first two rounds handily and holding Suarez even in the third, he clowned and annoyed the Argentine but accomplished little more. Suarez won the third, fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh rounds with a strenuous attack that left Kaplan bleeding freely from an old cut on the bridge of the nose. Kaplan managed to win the eighth.

ART STRESSED IN RADIO BILLS

The Loudspeaker

Sunday Alluring.
Good Announcing.
Stokowski Leader.
Roxy's Band Best.

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—Invariably an alluring day on the loudspeakers, Sunday is taking on a greater glamour than ever with the march to the microphones of the more notable symphonic bands.

Louis Reid.

Fiddlers, weaving their expert way through Tschaikowsky and Beethoven, have, on Sunday at least, elbowed the jazz crooners out of their accustomed ethereal dominance. The armchairs must be grateful, must be relieved at the hushing, temporary though it may be, of the wah-wah singers and their eternal tributes to St. Vitus.

The airing of the Philharmonic Orchestra should bring a special order of merit from the listening army to M. Paley and his staff at Columbia. Not only do the earcuppers hear great music superbly played but one of the most intelligent pieces of announcing on the radio. Nor does a hint of ballyhoo taint its journey on the air waves.

Julius Seebach is the voice at the microphone. He speaks with authority, directness and poise. He deserves a special huzzah for his refusal to yield to the temptation of continually voicing his identity. It is a fresh and unusual note in announcing. At last there is an attention-caller who believes that the public is more interested in a program than it is in him.

Philharmonic Off to Good Start

Critic Downes uses the intermission assigned to him with an explanation of music that, while not as colorful as that offered by Damrosch, is appropriately comprehensive. The Philharmonic programs, indeed, are off to a good start.

Stokowski and his Philadelphia band also chose a Sunday for the beginning of their new radio season. Stokowski, like Damrosch, comments on his program in a slow and accented voice, but with few and well chosen words.

The leading patfinder among the classical broadcasters, Stokowski passes by the familiar masters that haunt the better bands to give a friendly nod to the moderns. Radio to him is a medium for the new and spectacular, for tomorrow's sensation. If Gershwin can provide it, so much the better. If Ravel and Stravinsky do provide it you shall have it—and a snap of the fingers to the corrugated brows for whom all first class musical creation stopped with Richard Strauss.

He gave us the familiar hot tamale, "Bolero" with a warmth that must have made unnecessary the stoking of a million furnace fires. He conveys moods that remain hidden with other directors. No leader can fail utterly with "Bolero" but with Stokowski the piece takes on a glow that must cause even the anaemic to shed their shawls.

Before the concert he made much of an engineering secret that was to heighen the tone color of his program. But between you and me and the rattling of the Sunday papers, the music, so far as its tonal brilliance was concerned, was not superior to his radio concerts of last year.

Roxy Orchestra Best Theater Band

The Roxy Orchestra has a musical edge on the more pretentious symphonic periods, coming as it does a full hour or two before them. It is easily the best theater band of our time. It is equally at home in DeKoven or Debussy. It refuses to give mere snatches of the classics. It presents great music right down to the last note, and it has built up a name for itself that extends to every crossroad in the land.

The plan of giving only parts of great compositions undoubtedly had its origin in the peculiar time limitations of the broadcasters. The practice was fast becoming a matter of considerable annoyance to the listeners. It was like an invitation to what was expected to be an elaborate dinner, only to find that the soup and roast and salad had been omitted and satisfaction must be had, if at all, in a strawberry tart.

The Roxy Band put a stop to the custom. If Tschaikowsky's "Fourth Symphony" required the entire hour it would have it or nothing. It would not be divided with a dash of Dvorak.

The Roxy Band is not only soon to lose its conductor, Joseph Littau, but our agents report that Roxy himself will no longer hold a guiding hand over it. Upon his return from Europe Roxy will, they say, devote himself to planning the type of entertainment in the vast radio city that is now under way in the choicest of the Rockefeller pastures.

WE NOW PRESENT

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor

Apropos to the International Art Exhibit we might remark that all the good picture painting is not being done on canvas. We have excellent artists in radio studios who do Rembrandts with words. For instance, tune KDKA at 10:30 tonight and hear C. L. Menser paint the setting for "The Quod Wrangle"—in the NBC Miniature Theater. We have enjoyed these plays so much—the fine technique, the fine acting that we feel obligated to art to recommend them to you.

Darrell V. Martin

As for histrionic ability and true perception, is there any feature on the air to surpass the way the Dutch Minstrels carry us into bygone days with their quips and jokes? We always imagine we're in a theater when Paul Dumont and Al Bernard go to work on KDKA at 9:30.

Still speaking of pictures, we are reminded that Muriel Pollock is to do "Baby's Birthday Party," KDKA at 10:15—a song study of colored balloons, fancy paper hats, gay lanterns and all the excitement attending baby's first party.

"Lake of Dreams," a choral paraphrase of "The Swan," is to be sung over WCAE at 8. It is one of the numbers imitative of the creatures of the animal kingdom which Camille Saint-Saens wrote for the "Animal Carnival."

QUESTION A DAY:

Does the local station pay the network for programs or does the network pay the local station?—Melvin Gasper, 302 Hale street.

Answer—Lloyd Thomas, of KDKA, explains the matter thus: The network acts as a broker and leases telephone wires for broadcasting to stations all over the country. The local station, therefore, is not involved in any way on line charges. When the local station takes a sponsored program from New York, the network pays here for the time on the air. When the local station takes a sustaining feature (no sponsor), the local station pays the network. Clear?

JACK LITTLE AT WLW

Little Jack Little comes to WLW at midnight with a whole new bag of tricks. His schedule follows: Saturday, midnight to 12:30 a. m. Sunday, midnight to 12:30 a. m. Tuesday, 12:30 a. m. to 1:00 (Wednesday). Wednesday, 4:00 p. m. to 4:15 p. m. Thursday, 10:45 p. m. to 11:00 p. m. Friday, midnight to 12:30 a. m.

Knute Rockne's prediction of the Pitt-Notre Dame game next Saturday is to be given in the WJAS studios at 10:30 the night before the game. Ted Husing is to announce the contest from Pitt Stadium.

An outside announcer twisted his tongue on Knute Rockne the other eve and pronounced it "Root Knokne," much to his chagrin.

Did you sympathize with George Hicks at Pier 57 last night while he described the departure of Coste and Bellonte on the SS. France?

It wasn't any fun keeping the mike alive in a downpour of water, trying at the same time to share an engineer's raincoat.

One false step on Pier 57 and the boys would have been pickled in the briny Hudson.

Didn't that foggy horn remind you of Cap'n Jimmy Norton and Harbor Lights?

The NBC used good judgment in following the description with the playing of "Auld Lang Syne" in the studios at 711 Fifth avenue—where things were not so wet.

We think the broadcast could have been improved with a few farewell words from the aviators after the SS. France headed to sea. This could have been done with a short wave transmitter on the ship.

Jessica Dragonette, weighing little more than 100 pounds and less than five feet five inches tall, surprises everyone with her facility in attaining high notes and sustained passages as in "Some Day" and "La Paloma" last night.

For a young girl, Jessica certainly has burned a lot of midnight oil training and rehearsing. She is at a point of development far in advance of her age.

TODAY'S TID BIT:

There's a radio loud speaker in every office at KDKA so the executives can check up on programs without leaving the swivel chair.

"BY THE WAY—"

Artists and announcers at CBS have organized a football team . . . Peg Kastroll, night operator at KayDee, sometimes forgets herself answering the phone at home and greets the other party with "Good evening, this is KDKA." . . . Mary Charles, character delineator, has been signed to appear on the LaPalina Smoker over WJAS every Wednesday night . . . It takes 200 gallons of water a minute to cool the tubes at KayDee's Saxonburg rendezvous . . . Ted Husing, Columbia announcer, has traveled 21,820 miles by air and rail to cover 53 news and sports events since January 1, 1930.

ECZEMA ALMOST UNBEARABLE

Resinol Heals

"Some time ago eczema broke out on my leg. After weeks of special treatment during which time the itching and burning was so severe I could hardly stand it, I was told nothing more could be done for me. A friend of mine urged me to try Resinol Ointment, which I did. I am happy to say it healed my leg completely and I have never had any breaking out since. My husband also used Resinol for a rash on his hands with the same excellent results. We are never without it in our home." (Signed)—Mrs. E. France, Pawtucket, R.I.

AVOID UGLY BLEMISHES

Does a pimply face embarrass you? Get a package of Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets. The skin should begin to clear after you have taken the tablets a few nights, if you are like thousands of others.

Help cleanse the blood, bowels and liver with Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets, the successful substitute for calomel; there's no sickness or pain after taking them.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets do that which calomel does, and just as effectively, but their action is gentle and safe instead of severe and irritating.

Dr. Edwards spent years among patients afflicted with liver and bowel complaints and Olive Tablets are the immensely effective result. Take nightly for a week. See how much better you feel and look. 15c, 30c, 60c.

Annie Is Grief-Stricken Over Kid's Death

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

"The Edgewater Kid," Polack Annie's man, is murdered. Goldie Gorio's North Side gang, of which the Kid was a member, accuses Kinky King, leader of the West Side gang. Kinky swore to get The Kid for taking Annie from him. Later, Kinky is found murdered, a gold revolver, similar to that possessed by Goldie, beside him. To satisfy the public's demand for action, the police chief arrests Annie. He refuses Goldie's request for her release. In revenge, Goldie's gang throws the theater district into darkness and destroys public property. A committee of prominent citizens calls on the mayor, demanding protection.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER IX.

Polack Annie could not forget her man. The long hours in the detention cell made her grief no more bitter, but gave her more time to think. With the blood of her breed, the heritage of generations that had been knouted and herded and ravished and robbed, she was more orientated to feeling than to thinking. But here she was, where she had to think or sleep, and she couldn't sleep.

She was thrown in with other women, in nearby trans-sounding cells, who made the days raucous and the nights hideous. Hopheads, street-walkers, thieves' consorts, a hysterical chambermaid who had strangled her illegitimate baby, a mulatto wench who had badgered a state senator, the female product of the dregs and drugs and the yeggs and thugs of a metropolis.

Anna Daley, the lockup matron, was as sympathetic as might be asked for. A husky, not unhandsome woman, she could be kind and she could be brutal. Her blacksmith arms could enfold or knock cold. She was a civil service employe, but she knew her politics. Four of her six brothers were coppers, and the other two worked in City Hall. Goldie Gorio was to her a big shot. And Polack Annie was her star boarder.

Sorrowful
Thoughts of Kid Make Annie Cry

"There, there, child," she said consolingly as she brought her good-looking red-haired inmate her supper, sent for from the outside and paid for from the outside, "it ain' goin' to get you nowheres, cryin' them pretty eyes out. They never convict women for murder; cert'nly not women with your looks, an' least of all, with the inflooence you got—so——"

"Oh, it ain't that," sobbed Annie. "The rap is boloney. It's the Kid I'm cryin' over. I fell for him after I thought I never could fall for a man that way. An' they got him after I got to love him, an' they got him becus I loved him."

"Well, you'll meet him above, in a happier place," she breathed. "Pray an' have faith."

"They didn't even give him a chance to confess—to have a priest," wept Annie. "They gave him the works from acrost the street—an' on a Sund'y. All on account o' me. An' he was even goin' to marry me, he was that sweet an' square. But we never could let go of each other long enough when we were together for that."

The matron patted her.

Hardships
Girl Tells Matron Her History

"It was the only happiness I ever had. Them few months was heaven. Ever since I was born—for no reason I could ever figger out—I never had no life like other girls. My ol' man was killed blowin' a safe. My ol' lady stole to feed me. She was a terrible stew an' half the time she was in the hoosegow an' me an' my three sisters an' one brother panhandled or starved. I grew up on the streets an' in the alleys. Boys an' men was makin' a play for me ever since I can remember, even when I was in rompers. There's something about red hair, matron, that makes men go cookoo.

"Well, bein' exposed the way I was, I don't know why I didn't give in sooner. They say my ol' lady come of a pretty good fam'ly, an' maybe I had a streak from her. She come from Polish dukes or somethin', but she run away with my father, who brought her over here. I was born in Cleaver street, an' born honest, at that—they was married two weeks then. When I was eight I was runnin' the pail for beer, an' fightin' bums an' bartenders to get out again.

"When I was thirteen, ma got a stretch as a habitual. The kids was thrun in an orphan asylum, but I hid out. I hiked to Milwaukee, where I had an uncle. I thought he'd give me p'tection. He did—great. When I crawled out o' his house one mornin' at four, after I'd brained him with a chair as soon as I come to an' found enough stren'th again, I 'knew life' if you know what I mean."

Kinky King
Introduced to Him By Gangster

"I—I know what you mean, honey . . . that's sad: that's turrible."

"Well, I didn' have much at notime, an' now I didn' even have nothin' to save. I met a Great Lakes grainboat captain, an' he gimme a place to sleep an' somethin' to eat, an' at least he was good to me. I sailed the lakes for almost a year, an' then he got drunk an' got jealous o' some stevedore whose name I didn' even know an' he left me flat in Buff'lo.

"I hitch-hiked my way back, okay excep' in Sandusky, Ohio, where they vagged me an' chucked me in the hands of the Children's S'ciety. An', say, that outfit is tougher than a den o' lions. They preached at me, lit into me, fed me tracts an' sour beans, an' got me decent work on a farm. Oh, it was plenty recent. The farmer, an' the hired man an' the farmer's son—an' even the village preacher—they all took a special int'rest in me. I took it on the lam. Back to Cleaver Street for me. If I have to go crooked, I at least wanna be where there's movies an' there's things to wake you out o' your sleep excep' crickets an' yokels.

"By the time I got back, my brother, Pete, had been sprung out o' the orphanage an' was livin' with a penny-ante labor slugger who was ambitious to get into the beer racket. He set one eye on me, an' twenty minutes later I went out through a window an' didn' even stop to open it. He tailed me all over the town an' told me if I didn' listen to reason he'd croak my brother. Well, that lasted till he joined Kinky King's gang. To show he was a bigtimer, he flashed me in front o' Kinky.

Jealousy
Says Kinky Would Beat Her

"Kinky had a grand eye for that kind o' flashes. He took my gen'leman friend with his hand aroun' his Adam's apple, an' says, 'What's a bujok punk like you doin' with a redhead like that?' My lousy sweetheart says, 'Boss, that's my woman.' Kinky looks at him, then spits, then laughs, then growls. 'She is like hell,' he says. 'In this gang everything belongs to me, go on out an' walk down to City Hall . . . keep your eye on it . . . if City Hall caves in, I have to know it right away . . . you watch an' phone me if it does . . . an' don' come back till I give you orders.'

"He ain' got his orders yet.

"I went livin' in Kinky's house. When he was good to me, he was so good it turned my stomach. When he got sore he walloped me pretty. He had me black an' blue most o' the time. He was so jealous o' me, he'd beat me an' beg me an' kiss my shoes. He'd lock me in an' put guards on the doors, front an' back, when he had to leave me home. He dressed me up like the inside o' Goldie's car, an' he loved to take me around—where his mob an' the other gorillas could see me. So, one night, he took me to the Devil's Hall."

Polack Annie stopped. She closed her eyes, raised her shapely chin, clasped her hands between her knees, and sat with a sublimated smile of recollection and reflamed emotion.

Angered
Kinky Tipped Off About Kid

"That night—I—I met him—the Kid!

"He was only a kid. He had a fresh pan on him, an' a wicked eye. He was on the make, though he didn' have to be—every broad what ever saw him did a flop for him. But he didn' play the field. He was throwin' 'em over his shoulder. His eyes an' my eyes met—an' clicked. Lady, you could o' heard that click around the world. Kinky was potted, but he sat up with a jerk an' he slobbers at me an' wants to know what the hell. There was plenty o' hell. But Kinky, who'd been jealous o' the iceman an' the letter-carrier an' his own mob, not a one of 'em with guts enough to look cock-eyed at me as tough as they was, muffed the angle.

"I made him take me to the Hall almos' ev'ry night after that. The Kid never missed once. At last I got Kinky so plastered that he passed out. I officed the Kid. We didn' say much—we didn' need to. He put me in his car an' he took me to his flat.

"Nobody saw us leave—much. You know how the stools an' lice crawl to a noise like Kinky King. By the time the fiftieth heel was givin' him the low-down he wasn' only burnin' up becus I run out on him—Kinky King—an' becus I tossed him for one o' Goldie's gang—him, Kinky King—but becus I let a flock o' crums in on it so they could tip him off—him, Kinky King!

Fearful
Afraid When Kid Was Away

"I knew what it meant. The Kid tried to make me think it was all oke. I knew better. But I was hooked 'an so was he, an' in our hearts we knew we'd better do our lovin' while we had time. Goldie didn' say a lot, but he had the angle right, o' course. He'd jus' made some chump agreement that his mob an' Kinky's wouldn' rod nor rat so long as the boys staid on the reservations. But they hadn' made no deal about the girls.

That was a new twist—an' I was that twist.

"Ev'ry minute my Kid was with me was velvet. I cried myself blind whenever he left my sight. I shuddered at ev'ry noise. I counted the ticks o' the clock. My heart beat the seconds an' ev'ry beat was a jolt. Goldie was swell about it. He said Kinky didn't have the gizzard to croak one o' his boys. I knew better. That swill what Kinky used 'd make a rabbit fight a tiger, an' Kinky was no rabbit.

"Sat'd'y night was our night in, mostly, the Kid an' me. This p'tic'lar Sat'd'y night was—well, it was what the end o' the world oughta be. An' it was all o' that . . . he lef' me Sund'y mornin' to go to mass. He had to see Goldie after that. He said he'd be home for supper. I had the beer on the ice—the cold ham trimmed up with lettuce leaves an' the p'tato's boilin', watchin' over 'em, to get 'em jus' the way he loved 'em . . . I was smilin'—he learned me how to worry an' smile at the same time an' then—

"So you wanna tell me not to cry.

"I got a right to cry—I earned it—all the chiefs in the world couldn' squeeze a tear out o' me. I ain' cryin' becus I'm rapped, or becus I'm scared or becus I'm here. What the hell do I care what they do to me? They can't bring back my Kid, so he won't come home an' miss me. An' if he ain't there what do I care where I am? But I can cry. An' if I wanna cry, don't you stop me. Get me?"

"Sure," said the matron. "I'll cry with you."

THIEVES WRECK CAR AND LOOT

Four thieves who stole a truck owned by the Aurora Sign Company, 607 Webster avenue, and later used it to haul away two radios and a phonograph, stolen from Glenn and Richards Furniture store, 545 Miller avenue, Clairton, lost the truck and their loot when the machine crashed into an abutment at Conley's crossing of the Pennsylvania Railroad. The accident occurred 1½ miles from Clairton on the Clairton-Elizabeth road early today, according to a report of police.

The thieves backed the truck into an alley near the furniture store, forced a rear door and loaded the radios and phonograph, but were stopped from further depredations when Ralph Glenn, one of the store owners, put in his appearance, police said.

Glenn pursued the men in an automobile through the business section of Clairton, but lost the trail in a dense fog. The wrecked truck and the loot, smashed beyond repair, its owner stated, were found later by Clairton police. The thieves escaped.

NOTICE is hereby given that Ordinance, copy of which is published herewith, was introduced in the Council of the City of Pittsburgh on October 14, 1930, pursuant to the provisions of the several acts of Assembly, authorizing said city, without any petition of property owners, to open, widen, straighten, extend, vacate, grade, pave, curb, macadamize and otherwise improve streets and alleys or parts thereof, within its limits, viz:

BILL NO. 1903.

AN ORDINANCE—widening Lebanon road, in the Thirty-first Ward, of the City of Pittsburgh, from Mifflin road to the dividing line between the City of Pittsburgh and Mifflin Township, and providing that the costs, damages and expenses occasioned thereby be assessed against and collected from properties benefited thereby.

SECTION 1. Be it ordained and enacted by the City of Pittsburgh, in Council assembled, and it is hereby ordained and enacted by the authority of the same, that Lebanon road, in the Thirty-first Ward, of the City of Pittsburgh, from Mifflin road to the dividing line between the City of Pittsburgh and Mifflin Township, be and the same is hereby widened to a variable width, so that the street as widened shall lie between the hereinafter described street lines, to-wit:

Beginning at a point on the center line of Mifflin road, 45 feet in width, as described in Hays Borough Ordinance No. 75, dated August 1st, 1922, and as shown on the Viewers' Plan of Mifflin road (formerly Irwin street) as prepared by the County of Allegheny and of record in the Department of Public Works, Bureau of Engineering, Division of Surveys, of the City of Pittsburgh, as Survey Plan No. 2218, said point of beginning being at station 187+08.77 on the stationing as shown on the said Viewers' Plan, and a chord bearing, from the point of compound curve at station 186+99.27 to the above-mentioned point of beginning, being south 54 deg. 55 min. 15 sec. east, the above and following mentioned bearings being in conformity with the bearings as shown on the said Viewers' Plan; said point of beginning shall be known as station 0+00 for the purpose of this ordinance; thence extending south 22 deg. 34 min. 30 sec. west 784.35 feet to a point of curve at station 7+84.35; thence southwardly by the arc of a circle deflecting to the left with a radius of 1,432.69 feet and a central angle of 34 deg. 00 min. 00 sec. for a distance of 850.17 feet to a point of tangent at station 16+34.52; thence by the tangent south [illegible] of compound curve, said point of compound curve being at a radial distance of 47 feet east of the point of curve on the above described survey line at station 7+84.35; thence southwardly by the arc of a circle deflecting to the left with a radius of 1,[illegible] feet and a central angle of 18 deg. 00 min. 00 sec. for a distance of 437.35 feet, parallel to and at a radial distance of 47 feet east of the above described survey line, to a point of compound curve; thence southwardly by the arc of a circle deflecting to the left with a radius of 1,150.95 feet and a central angle of 15 deg. 55 min. 00 sec. for a distance of 319.75 feet to a point of tangent; thence by the tangent south 11 deg. 25 min. 30 sec. east 64.38 feet to a point, said point being at a perpendicular distance of 58 feet east of a point of tangent on the above described survey line at station 16+34.52; thence, continuing by the tangent south 11 deg. 25 min. 30 sec. east 118 feet, more or less, to the dividing line between the City of Pittsburgh and Mifflin Township.

SECTION 2. The Department of Public Works is hereby authorized and directed to cause said Lebanon road in the Thirty-first Ward of the City of Pittsburgh, from Mifflin road to the dividing line between the City of Pittsburgh and Mifflin Township to be widened in conformity with the provisions of Section 1 of this Ordinance.

SECTION 3. The costs, damages and expenses occasioned thereby and the benefits to pay the same shall be assessed against and collected from properties benefited thereby, in accordance with the provisions of the Acts of Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania relating thereto and regulating the same, and the City's share thereof shall be chargeable to and payable from Bond Fund No. 293, Street Bonds, 1928.

SECTION 4. That any Ordinance or part of Ordinance, conflicting with the provisions of this Ordinance, be and the same is hereby repealed, so far as the same affects this Ordinance.

NOTICE is hereby given that Ordinance, copy of which is published herewith, was introduced in the Council of the City of Pittsburgh on October 14, 1930, pursuant to the provisions of the several Acts of Assembly, authorizing said City, without any petition of property owners, to open, widen, straighten, extend, vacate, grade, pave, curb, macadamize and otherwise improve streets and alleys or parts thereof, within its limits, viz:

BILL NO. 1901.

AN ORDINANCE—Authorizing and directing the grading, paving and curbing, relocating the water course, and otherwise improving of Lebanon road, from Mifflin road to the line dividing the City of Pittsburgh and Mifflin Township, including, as may be necessary, the grading of approaches on streets affected thereby and sinking of exploratory test holes; letting a contract or contracts therefor, and providing that the costs, damages and expenses of the same be assessed against and collected from property specially benefited thereby, and providing, further, for the payment of the City's share thereof.

SECTION 1. Be it ordained and enacted by the City of Pittsburgh, in Council assembled, and it is hereby ordained and enacted by the authority of the same, That Lebanon road, from Mifflin road to the line dividing the City of Pittsburgh and Mifflin Township, be graded, paved and curbed, and otherwise improved, and the water course be relocated, and that, as may be necessary, approaches be graded on streets affected thereby and exploratory test holes be sunk.

SECTION 2. The Mayor and the Director of the Department of Public Works are hereby authorized and directed to advertise, in accordance with the Acts of Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, and the Ordinances of the said City of Pittsburgh relating thereto and regulating the same, for proposals for the grading, paving and curbing, relocating the water course, and otherwise improving of said street between said points, including, as may be necessary, the grading of said approaches and sinking of exploratory test holes; the contract or contracts therefor to be let in the manner directed by the said Acts of Assembly and Ordinances, and the contract price or contract prices, if let in separate contracts, not to exceed the total sum of $70,000.00, which is the estimate of the whole cost as furnished by the Department of Public Works.

SECTION 3. The costs, damages and expenses of the same shall be assessed against and collected from properties specially benefited thereby, in accordance with the provisions of the Acts of Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania relating thereto and regulating the same, and the city's share thereof shall be chargeable to and payable from Bond Fund No. 293, Street Bonds, 1928.

SECTION 4. That any Ordinance or part of Ordinance, conflicting with the provisions of this Ordinance, be and the same is hereby repealed so far as the same affects this Ordinance.

NOTICE is hereby given that Ordinances, copies of which are published herewith, were introduced in the Council of the City of Pittsburgh on October 8, 1930, pursuant to the provisions of the several Acts of Assembly, authorizing said city, without any petition of property owners, to open, widen, straighten, extend, vacate, pave, curb, macadamize and otherwise improve streets and alleys or parts thereof, within its limits, viz:

BILL NO. 1875.

AN ORDINANCE—Authorizing and directing the grading to a width of 32 feet, paving and curbing of Grasmere street, from Oakwood road to Glendon street, including, as may be necessary, the grading of approaches on streets affected thereby and sinking of exploratory test holes; letting a contract or contracts therefore, and providing that the costs, damages and expenses of the same be assessed against and collected from property specially benefited thereby, and providing, further, for the payment of the city's share thereof.

SECTION 1. Be it ordained and enacted by the City of Pittsburgh, in Council assembled, and it is hereby ordained and enacted by the authority of the same, That Grasmere street, from Oakwood road to Glendon street, be graded to a width of 32 feet, paved and curbed, and that as may be necessary, approaches be graded on streets affected thereby and exploratory test holes be sunk.

SECTION 2. DAILY TRUE STORY

'Wise Guy'

A few months ago Mr. Martin J. Stewart was just "Mart Stewart," who worked for Grogan, the house painter.

Money makes a difference.

Mart Stewart felt like pinching himself, one morning, to make sure he wasn't dreaming—to make sure he wasn't a bespattered house painter any more, but East Digby's wealthiest citizen.

It was true enough. A sort of recluse uncle who had dwelt about a thousand miles away and died intestate, couldn't take a fortune of around $100,000 along with him. If he could have managed this, Mart would still be painting houses.

Mart continued to live in the little cottage where he was born. He was going to do big things in time, but, as he told his friends, he was a "wise guy" and would move slowly.

He got a great kick out of hiring Grogan, his former boss, to paint his cottage. He engaged old Simms and his wife to live with him and cook and run the place. He was through cooking his own meals.

Mart's only recreation had been to hang out in Pop Hadley's pool parlor and, when he could spare a little change, to play pool.

Now, Mart, really well dressed because he took the advice of a city tailor and haberdasher, hung around Pop's place more than ever and thoroughly enjoyed himself.

No Swell-Head

There's some difference between scrubbing half the paint off your hands and walking a mile down to Pop's place for the extravagance of one game of pool, and in driving over to the pool room in your own classy phaeton, well dressed, and with a pocket full of change.

Otherwise, Mart was the same.

Pop remarked to Mart that everybody was glad he had become rich because he didn't get swell-headed.

"I'm a wise guy, Pop," Mart told him, "and while I got more money than the other folks here, it don't make me no different. I ain't no better or worse."

"You are a wise guy, Mart—you'll be wise in everything, I guess, except wimmin—the wisest man ever lived was no match for a heartless woman."

Mart was playing with Pop, himself, one evening, in the poolroom, waiting for some of the boys who would join him later in a series of games.

"Yes, sir," Pop said, as if they had been discussing this right along, "the girls will run you ragged, Mart—and you'll fall for the dumbest Dora of all of 'em—some girl just slick enough to grab you for your money."

"Yeah? Me fall for some fortune-huntin' dame? You're goofy, Pop," Mart retorted, "I'm a wise guy—I know my onions."

Will Attend Fair

Pop framed the balls for another game. No need to sink the fifteen ball, as it wouldn't save Pop the game if he got it. Mart lighted a cigaret he took from a gold and black Japanese case—one of his signs of opulence.

"No sir," he said, exhaling as he spoke, with all the flourish of a midnight sport in a sunset village, "when I decide to build me a big house and get a runnin' mate, she ain't goin' to be no gold-diggin' dame, or anything like that."

"Says you!" Bart Peabody called out.

"Says me," Mart retorted. "I'll get me some innocent little gal who don't even know I got money."

"There may be some gals who don't know you got money, Mart, but that's all," Pop remarked.

"I got you—I'm right alongside of you, maybe a little ahead of you, Pop," Mart said with a chuckle. "You mean there's no innocent girls, eh?"

"Oh, there's plenty of good girls, Mart, but to be a good girl these days a girl has to be mighty wise. I suppose you're going to the Digby County Fair?"

"Try and stop me."

They hung around, had their games after the other boys came and, one by one, drifted homeward. Mart didn't have to get up at six, fry himself an egg, get into his paint-stiffened overalls and be on the house-painting job at seven. Pop didn't open up his place until along around noon.

And so they sat and smoked and talked after Pop had put out the lights in the back room and covered the tables.

"I thought," Pop said, "that the fluffy blonde from Kingston was going to land you."

"Nope—she was purty, though."

"She was a stenographer in th' Kingston office of th' lawyer who put my legacy through. I figgered her out, she got wise to my fortune and comes here, pretending never to have heard of me."

"Guess you are a wise guy."

Mart attended the Digby County Fair. He drove over in style to Digby, got the best room at the Digby House and proceeded to take in the fair, every one of its five days. Heretofore his limit at a county fair had been half a day and about $2 to spend.

Thanks Uncle

Mart had a swell idea. He introduced himself as "Sim Johnson from Kingston." He learned that the girl's name was Alice Adams. She came from Westwood just as an extra waitress during the fair, to earn extra money, she explained.

Mart took Alice to the fair the next afternoon. He told her he was a shoe clerk in Kingston.

They had a swell time and Alice didn't once try to make love to Mart. When he wanted to kiss her that night after the dance in the town hall, she refused.

Next afternoon they took in more of the fair and among other things, rode on the carousel—called, there, a "Merry-go-'round." Mart caught one of the brass rings as they went around. He showed it to Alice, who stuck out her hand to take it. He slipped it on the engagement finger.

Alice blushed.

"I'll get you a real one, Alice."

"Oh," she cried, "I—I was joking. I didn't mean — I wouldn't have you think—"

She dabbed her eyes with her handkerchief.

Pop Hadley got a letter from his niece, Alice Adams, of Westwood, the very next day. Part of it read:

"Thanks, dear Uncle John. It worked swell. That was a wonderful tip you gave me. I pretended to be awfully surprised when he admitted he wasn't Sim Johnson, but Martin Stewart."

Back home Mart said to Pop: "You could have knocked me down with a steam roller, Pop, when I found out Alice was your niece. Bet you was surprised."

"Never more surprised in my life," Pop said.

"And I got me a girl who didn't know I had a cent in the world—a darn innocent, sweet little girl who fell in love with me thinkin' I was a poor shoe clerk. I told you no gold-digger would rope yours truly in."

"Mart," Pop Hadley said, emphatically, "you are sure one wise guy."

WITH FRISBY IN DARKEST AFRICA!

By HORACE WALPOLE FRISBY

I wonder how many of my readers are familiar with the Egba Egba tongue—that curious and difficult arrangement of guttural polysyllabubs, spoken with lightning rapidity by the Abeokuta tribesmen? Very well, I will then refrain from writing today's installment in Egba Egba tongue, and continue in English, which will be easier for you to understand. The population of Africa was estimated at 100,000 in 1853. My first task was to check and see if this number was correct. This task completed, I reported to the National Georgraphical Society that the figure was correct. I then proceeded to Egba Egba. My receding chin helped me a great deal, because I was able to disguise me self and therefore passed as an Egba Egba chief. (See picture above.) The Egba Egba chief has several wives and wears huge feet, and is fond of rum and gin. Whenever the chief meets an inferior person, the chief bends down and the inferior is permitted to kick him as hard as he can. This is a symbol of the chief's loyalty. I submitted to this indignity until—but let me reserve this episode until some future installment when I have more space. Suffice it to say the natives have a peculiar sense of humor, and it was not until. . . .

Just how to go about it is not clear, but perhaps—

1. Tennis courts could be converted into football fields.

2. Ping pong balls substituted for pigskins.

3. Require players to hop on one foot.

4. Deliver all college yells in a whisper.

Advising local authors to give up topics of crime and immorality, the California Literature Society suggests they produce work which will give the rising generation "an impulse to neighborly kindness and an aspiration for better things."

There's no need to raise the roof.
Save your tears and use them later
Like your ma does on your pater.

WHY PITTSBURGH IS GREAT
It Has Worldwide Fame for Its Preserved Products

Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph

BE A PITTSBURGH BOOSTER
To Your Friends in Other Cities

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 18, 1930

[illegible]

Hail to New Air Line!

Next Saturday Pittsburgh Becomes Station on Transcontinental Route—Other Brief Comment.

Next Saturday will be a Red Letter day for Pittsburgh. The city has put on gala array for less significant occasions. Next Saturday a transcontinental air service will be inaugurated between New York and Los Angeles, with Pittsburgh a station on the route. In view of the developments that are certain to follow, the impending event may be likened to the driving of the silver spike on May 10, 1869, which gave the United States its first transcontinental railroad. To Pittsburgh, at least, it will be scarcely less momentous.

There is no doubt whatever that aviation is going to revolutionize our transportation system. There is no doubt that within a few years people in general will no longer be content to spend several days on a trip to the Pacific coast, or a full day or night for a trip to New York, but will instead make the journey swiftly, safely and comfortably by airplane. And one does not have to be very far-sighted to perceive the advantage that it is going to be to Pittsburgh to be established thus early as the aerial Gateway to the West.

Representatives of three states participated yesterday in the celebration of the completion of the Lincoln and William Penn highways west of Pittsburgh. Pennsylvanians may well take pride in what their state has done to improve these important interstate automobile routes. On the improvement of the Lincoln Highway alone we have spent $10,000,000 in recent years. The road has been widened at points where traffic is heaviest, and in many places has been completely relocated to eliminate curves and grades.

The Lincoln Highway, first of the transcontinental routes to attract attention, is still our most famous road. Pennsylvania found that it could not get along with only one first-class road across the state from west to east, so it built the William Penn Highway and the Roosevelt Highway. Just as Pennsylvania needed more trans-state roads, so the nation needs more transcontinental highways. Improvement of the facilities for automobile travel from coast to coast is one of the most important aims of the Hearst newspapers.

The season of fog has arrived, which makes driving dangerous on country roads at night and in the early morning. The City Council has arranged to provide a guard rail on a hazardous stretch of the Noblestown road. It is to be hoped the county authorities will be equally alert. There are several unprotected places on the new Fleming Park road—places where, if an automobile should leave the pavement, it would plunge over a declivity.

Another divorce case in Common Pleas Court, the sequel to an elopement, is a fresh reminder of the risk taken in hasty marriages. But marriage statistics just issued by the Federal Census Bureau suggest that the requirement that several days intervene between the application for a license and its issuance is not always effective in preventing elopements. For marriages have declined in several states which recently imposed such a requirement, while they have increased in adjacent states which do not demand delay. The situation presents an argument for uniform marrriage laws.

The Welfare Fund will ask for $1,520,248 in its annual campaign next month. That is $346,000 more than was requested last year; but no one will deny that the need for charitable activity is proportionately greater than it was in 1929. Furthermore, eight philanthropic organizations have joined the fund since the last solicitation, bringing the members to 39. It is also worth noting that several cities in Pittsburgh's population class have set their goals much higher. The Welfare Fund's request is not unreasonable, and there should be no question of Pittsburgh's ability to grant it.

A Harrisburg dispatch reports that two industrial concerns which had been killing fish by dumping poisonous substances into streams have been fined, made to pay $500 each to restock the streams with fish, and required to adopt other methods of disposing of their waste material. Drastic as this sounds, it is justified. No one expects the Monongahela River to be freed from industrial pollution, but the purity of the not yet hopelessly contaminated streams in the central part of the state, where the plants of the concerns in question are located, should be preserved.

It is interesting to find Pennsylvania farmers adopting the same methods that have made chain stores so successful. The Department of Agriculture has gathered statistics showing that 24,000 farmers in this state bought a large part of their supplies co-operatively last year. Purchasing in carload lots, which were then distributed according to need, they were able to obtain tools, seeds, fertilizer, paints and a great variety of other articles much more cheaply than if each farmer had purchased independently. Pennsylvania's co-operative agricultural associations did $54,527,675 of business in 1929. Co-operation is beneficial all around, to buyers, sellers and the public.

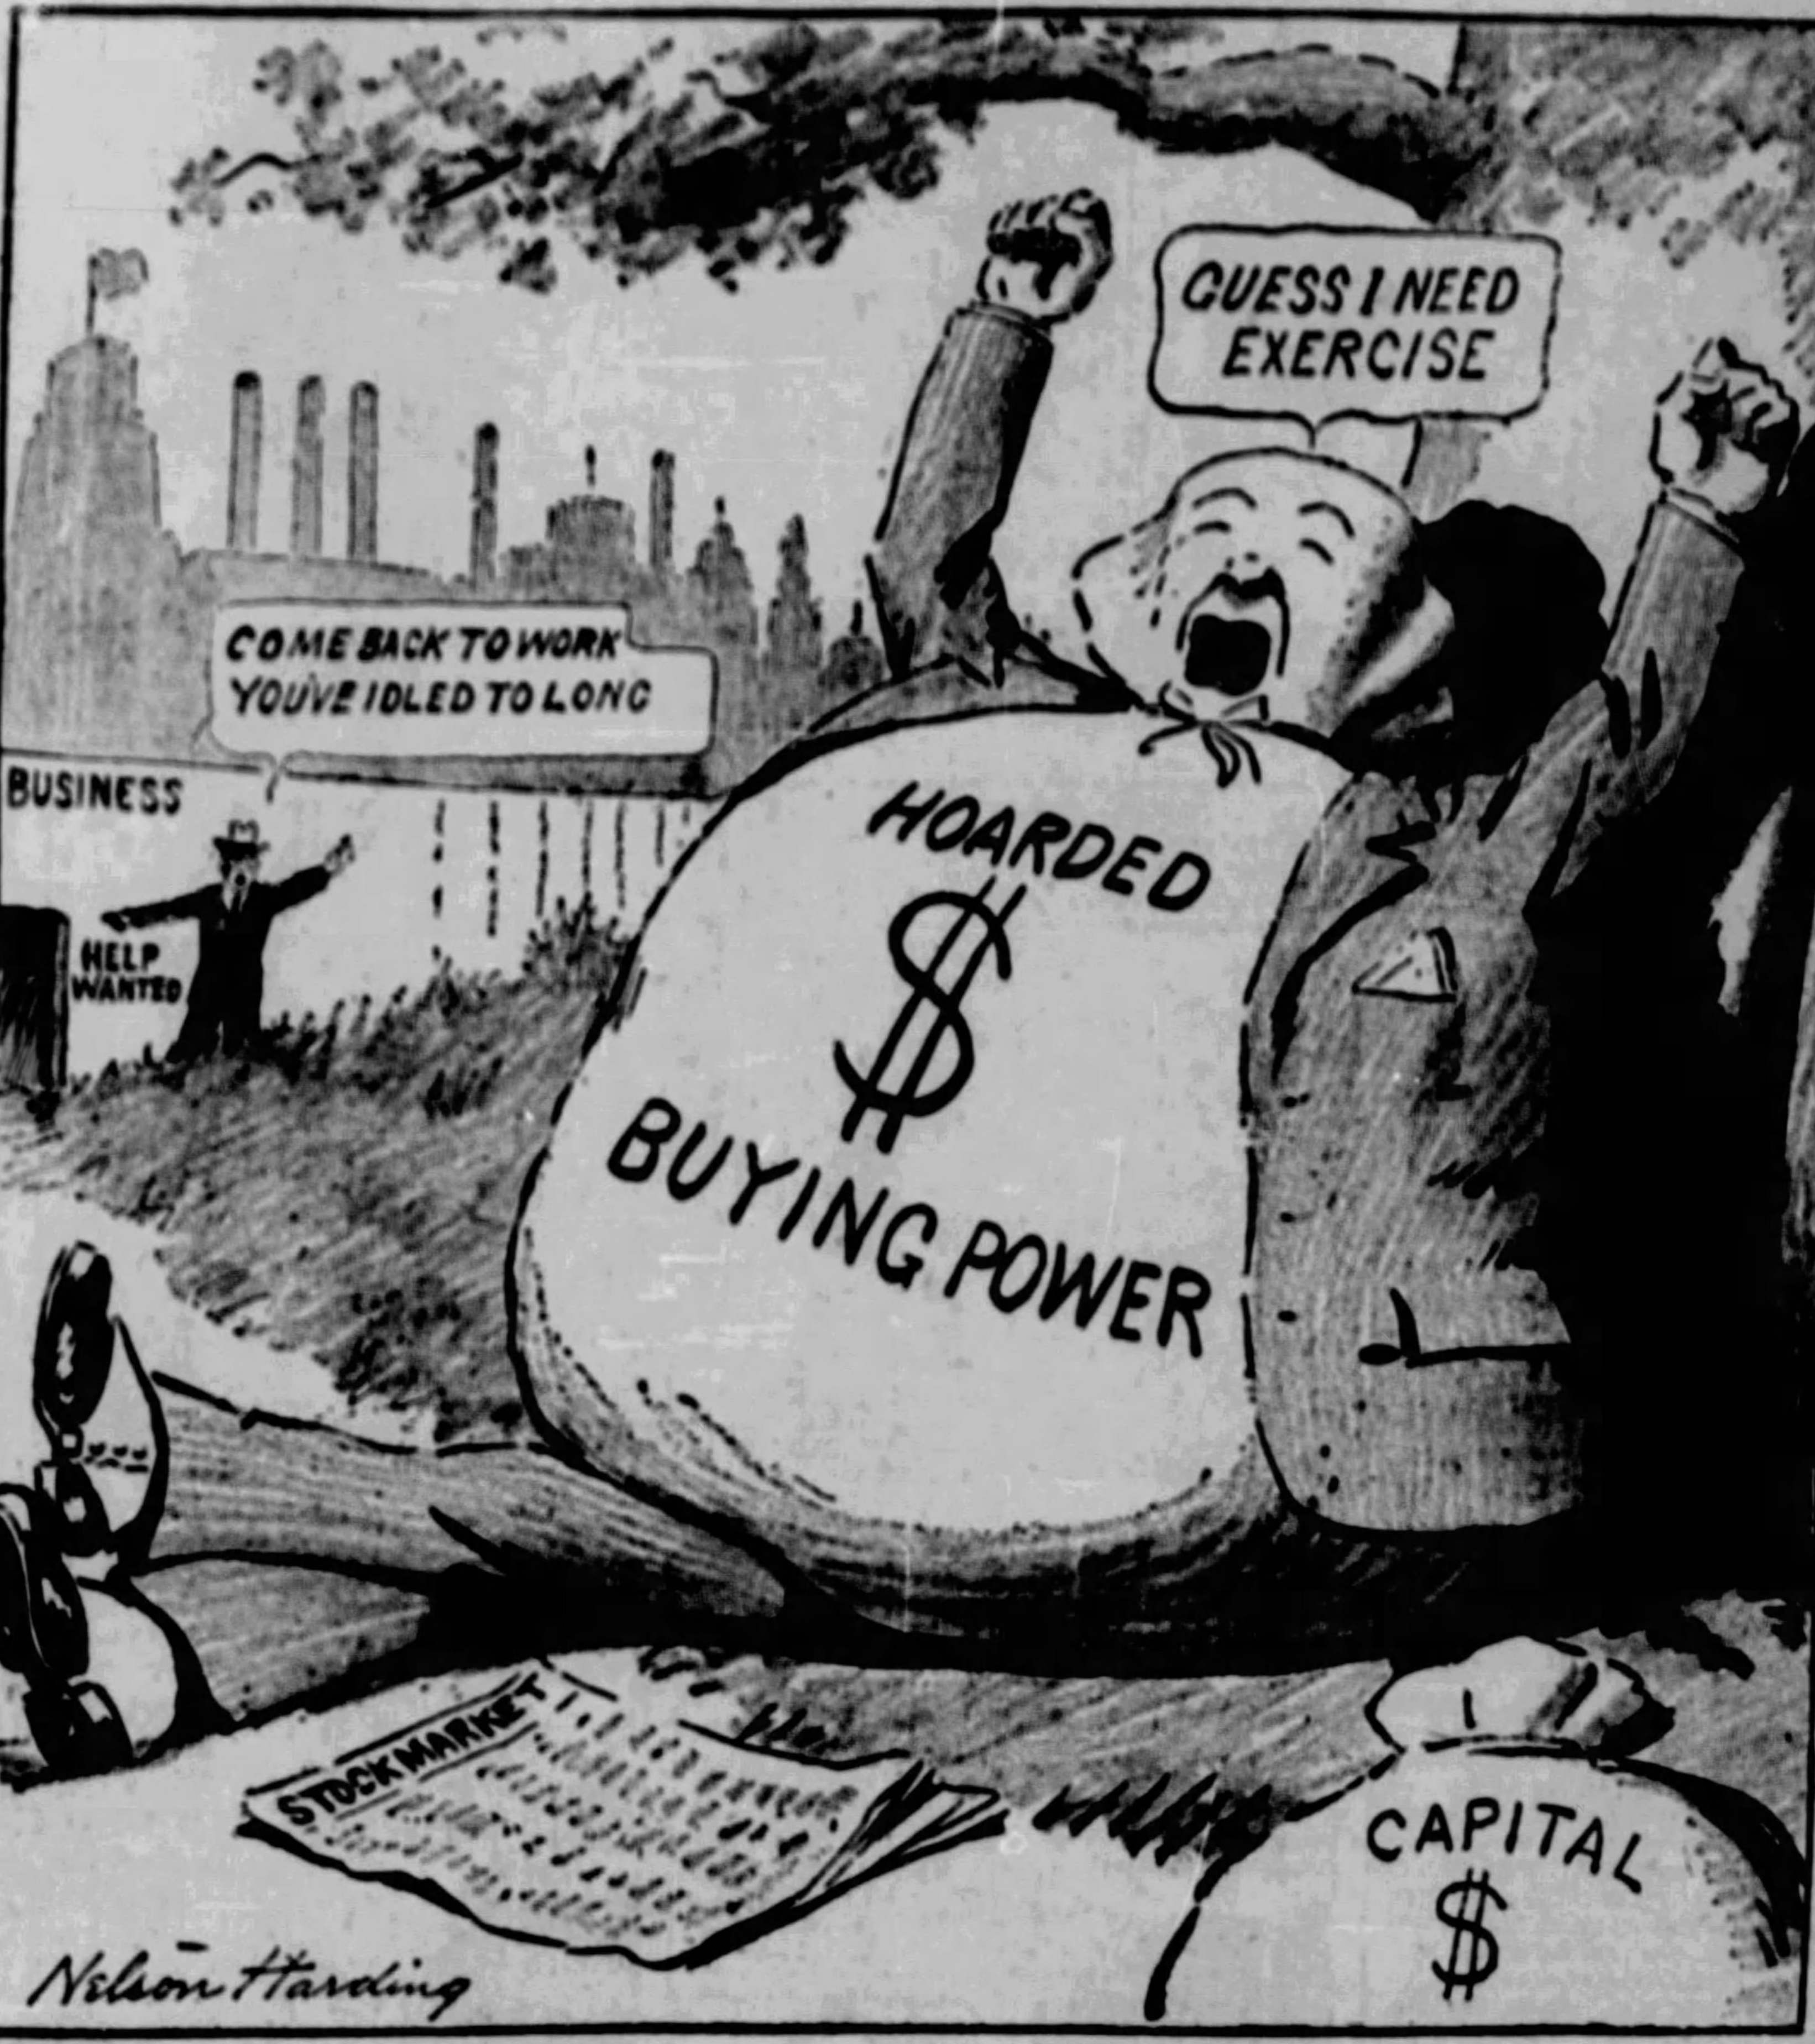
A movement has been started in the Philadelphia League of Women Voters to call for a legislative inquiry into the voting machine muddle. Both Philadelphia and Pittsburgh have been deprived of voting machines for the November election, for entirely different reasons. It does seem strange that so many obstacles have been raised to the installation of the machines in this state, after their successful use for years in other states.

A speaker at the meeting of the Research Bureau for Retail Training declared certain machine-made products were inferior to those made by hand. We agree. We are certain those 500 gallons of apple butter made by the women of the First Presbyterian Church of Carnegie in great outdoor kettles, which they stirred with big wooden paddles, would not taste nearly so good if they had been stirred mechanically.

Friends of organized labor find difficulty in defending the unions when the unions quarrel among themselves and interfere with construction jobs, as in the case of the Allegheny General Hospital, where steam fitters and structural iron workers have gone on strike because of a dispute as to which union should set up a mechanical stoker. Disputes of a similar character have interfered with the building of some of Pittsburgh's new schools. Such questions should be settled before construction is commenced.

The Idle Rich

By Nelson Harding



This large, stout party's loafed so long,
No wonder he is feeling strong.
If he gets up and circulates
Back where the figure indicates

And throws that Wall St. dope away
And calls his lengthy loaf a day
And does the job he's fit to do
Our business troubles will be few.

"Bugs" Baer Says:

Weekly News Reel

Yale: A census of raccoon coats indicates we have three times as many students as we thought.

Pomona: A tree-sitter was killed diving for worms.

Siam: Why should America worry over its juvenile delinquents? When we get 'em, they're twins.

Tokio: The wife of an Illinois mayor was robbed of her jewels. You should never carry politics into the home.

England: Croyden intended to erect a monument at every place Levine bounced while landing here. But it would cost too much.

Bombay: We would like to find one bank president who never took a pencil home when he was an office boy.

China: American funny people. They buy our carpets and hang them on the wall, put lamps on the floor and vote dry so that they can get drunk. Please pass the rice.

Whizzburgh: The biggest citizen in our town is a clerk in a chain store. Opportunity only knocks once. But it knocks you dead.

Switzerland: So many diplomatic speeches made in these mountains that school children are picking up an education on Alpine echoes.

Bucharest: The school teacher asked Prince Carol to bring a note from his father and it looks like another romance has started.

Law Enforcement: Somebody is being greased around here. And we don't mean channel swimmers.

Washington: The Army-Navy football game will not be played because the middies and cadets hate each other. We always thought that was the reason they played the game.

Ireland: When asked about the finish of the American Cup races, Sir Tommy Lipton said, "Television is a wonderful thing."

Isn't It So?

Most people who talk as if they are demanding justice are really begging charity.

THE SCIENCE OF CHEMISTRY

By Archibald Henderson

One of the most modern of sciences is chemistry, and yet it is one of the most useful. It is almost impossible for anyone living today to realize that chemistry as practised today has a history of little more than two centuries. Back of chemistry lies pharmacy, medicine, alchemy. Back of those lay fitful and fantastic theories about the nature of substance, and strange philosophical lucubrations regarding the constitution of matter. But we have to come down to modern times (specifically to the seventeenth century) to find the true origin of chemical science as we know it today.

The germ of modern scientific method (the root principle) was formulated by Roger Bacon. Boyle, Priestley, Cavendish, Lavoisier laid strong and sure technic and basic principles of true scientific method in chemistry. Liebig, Woehler, Ramsay, Richards and countless others have carried on this technic and these principles in our own era.

For two centuries the science of chemistry did not exist. Investigators there were, and in plenty, from the time of primitive man down through the ages. But science, such as it was, may best be described as accumulative. Great tomes were written, vast records were kept, of the results of observations. If two or more substances were brought together certain things would take place. The results were known, but the reasons for those results were not understood. Chemistry, like physics, may be described as a science of exact measurements. Chemistry requires elaborate and delicate apparatus—test tubes, retorts, scales, thermometers, barometers and countless pieces of refined machinery which often have to be invented or specially manufactured in order to carry through particular experiments.

Chemistry is dangerous. This has been so ever since the time of the invention of gunpowder and other forms of explosives. It has been demonstrated countless times that nothing is more dangerous in a chemical laboratory than ignorance. The pharmacist must know which drug or drugs in combination are deadly in their effects. The chemist must know (and must know why) certain substances when combined will blow things to smithereens.

For 2,000 years science scarcely progressed in theory, beyond the more or less mystical ideas of Aristotle. It was he who formulated the theory that the universe was made of four elements—earth, air, fire and water. But today a chemical element is a very different thing to that designated as an element by Aristotle. After a time the study of substances was taken up by a group of people who called themselves alchemists. Alchemy was a weird combination of religion and science, of superstition and natural philosophy. Spirits were believed to inhabit substances; the elements had their respective deities. Scientific experiment was a form of magnified fake; chemical and physical demonstrations were made with great hocus pocus. The people must not be enlightened, but must be mystified. Solemn incantations must be spoken and the power of spirits or of the divine being invoked.

For centuries science had to fight a battle with the church. From Bacon to Priestley scientists were persecuted, imprisoned or punished for following the path of reason. But the battle was won in recent times, and chemistry is one of the great and permanently established institutions of civilization. Without chemistry our civilization could scarcely endure. The chemistry of food is one of the most useful and indispensable features of modern industry and modern science.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

An hour ago the light was clanging brass;
The yellow earth sprawled flat along the rocks

Across the miles of tortured, twanging air,
There spreads a shadow, like a stilling hand—
And in the hush the earth begins to move,
Flex its great muscles, softly come alive.

The grasses gild—and, from the chapparal,
There comes a scent of apples, pitch and spice,

The sky, that was as white as bleaching bone,
Is quickened now with a warm, flooding tide
Of pearl and coral, rose and apricot,
That spreads and spills until the valley brims
With pools of honey and the gullies stream
With shadows, darkly purple as new wine.

To north, to south, the long Sierra heaves
Its black-troughed ridges, bronze against the gold,
Fountains of crimson spurting scarlet spray.

Half lost beneath the roaring surf of flame,
Molten, enormous, dropping down and down,
Until, with one last flare, its blaze is gone;
And, in the east, between the tall, black files
Of bull pines, gleams a band of green,
Clear as thin jade—like one, high, singing note.

And now, as suddenly as fire swept
In pulsing waves across the ashen sky,
So suddenly the brightness ebbs and cools;
Once more the sky is white, but now with space;
Like smoke the mountains crumble and the rocks dissolve,
And there is silence where the color sang.

The tiny, squeaking flutter of a bat—
Then once more silence—and above the peak

Worst Story I Have Heard Today

By WILL ROGERS

A guy had better keep his mouth busy chewing gum sometimes until he finds out how the land lays. I know a lot of fellows that gets themselves in wrong for life by wise cracks when a wise crack isn't exactly on the program.

There was a nut that was good at spreading the joyful talk, and he met his old college chum on the Pullman. So they smoked and recalled old times.

"Well," says the smart guy, "you ain't still engaged to that Moore girl, I reckon?"

"No."

"Of course not. I always said you'd ditch that jane somehow, although it did look, there in the last year, as though she had you surrounded and your retreat cut off. I told the boys to watch you make your getaway as soon as commencement was over. But how did you manage it, anyway?"

"I married her."

Text for Today And every one that hath forsaken houses, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for my name sake, shall receive an hundredfold, and shall inherit everlasting life.—Matthew, xiv:29.

(The text for today is suggested by the Rev. Albert G. Merkens, pastor, First Trinity Lutheran Church, East End.)

Drawn by Hal Coffman.

MY GOODNESS—JACK'S DOWN STAIRS—I MUST NEVER LET HIM SEE ME SO UNTIDY
YOU'RE THAT WAY ALL THE TIME SEEMS TO ME
WHY SOME MARRIAGES GO ON THE ROCKS
HELLO JACK—I'VE BEEN SO TIRED AND LAZY ALL DAY

Before marriage, every girl tries to look her best for her intended husband. When Jack calls up or Bill rings the doorbell, she gets out the powder puff and dashes for the mirror like a hook and ladder company answering a six-alarm fire.

Yet, AFTER marriage, some girls think that "anything goes." Sloppy and untidy themselves, they leave the kitchen sink full of dirty dishes, let dust gather on the furniture, strew clothes over the chairs.

No wonder such marriages go on the rocks. Husbands are not always as dumb as you might think. They remember the girl they used to know, and compare her with the wife that she has turned out to be.

Personal tidiness and a neat, cheerful home take work. But even a few minutes' work a day makes a wonderful difference, keeps many a couple out of the divorce court.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—The new Sealyham puppy "Rainbow" seems to have the run of the house these days. Upon his arrival from the private kennels of Ben R. Meyer in California he was frightened by the long train ride and very trembling. But after several weeks he is the typical New Yorker—a fresh buttinsky.

There is only one thing he hasn't been into on the place and that is a small iron office safe. But he has been working on that between finishing up what is left of a bath shower curtain and a left evening slipper belonging to his mistress. He sleeps, incidentally, on his back with his feet in the air.

"Rainbow" is in bench-legged puppyhood and when he starts to run and bark, as he does at everybody, he tumbles into an awkward and mystified squat. He has a grave, bewhiskered face and bright rosy tongue and suggests the drooping mustached Laurence D'Orsay.

Billy, the Boston, more than seven years his senior, has high-hatted him from the start. He sits and watches him with a sober air of detachment, but it is noticeable that when "Rainbow" frisks into another room, he trots in after him. But his attitude continues stiffly sedate and howcome!

My own impression is that "Rainbow" doesn't give a whoop. Life to him is a gay lark and when he is not pursuing some sportive and imaginary speck or chewing on something he has no business to chew he is just a puff white butter-ball sleeping his head off.

Twice during the still of dead night he has awakened the entire household to jump upon a chair and rebuke the moon. You'd think he was running the metropolis. When as a matter of fact he is just a small town Beverly Hills dog and will have to improve a lot before he makes good in the city.

After owning a tailless dog for so long, "Rainbow's" tail is utterly fascinating. It tires you just to watch. It swishes up and down, sideways and at times even cater-cornered. He is the tail-waggingest dog I have ever seen and by six blocks the most curious.

"Rainbow" had the closest of narrow squeaks his first 24 hours in the big town. He had just been scrubbed free of train dirt to a snowy, fluffy white and was seeing the sights from the front seat of an automobile. All of a sudden and for no reason apparent he leaped over the side of the car into a roadway spinning with traffic. There was a screeching of brakes and a white-faced motorist stopped his wheels within an inch of him. He will sit inside tied to a seat until he picks up a little gumption from now on.

A beloved dog, "Junior," joined that happy throng "retrieving birds of paradise in Elysian fields" about eight years ago. His life was a cruel sacrifice to careless motoring, and at the time I vowed never to own another dog. Kipling was right about giving your heart to a dog to tear. And here I am with two. Billy, because he is lovable and handicapped by deafness will always be the No. 1 dog, yet it is surprising how much extra love one can have for an extra dog, proving again love is limitless and everything will be all right in the autumn.

* * *

Outside of a gurgling, pink-cheeked baby nothing is so appealing to me as that flawless faith and deep fondness that lie in the eyes of a dog. I beheld it but once among humans and that was when I saw a mother one crepuscular dawn fall at the feet of a governor in a mid-west state and sob out her thanks for saving her boy from the gallows.

* * *

The Boston, Billy, has always been somewhat the aristocrat, whether from highly pedigreed natural instincts or from that reserve so typical of the deaf, I do not know. His manners are perfect. He never begs for food and wipes his mouth on an old rug in a back hall after each meal. He is as neat as a pin, aloof, diffident, honorable.

* * *

But "Rainbow" has just come barging in from a walk in the park with his firebrand eyes, icicle nose and twitching tail. From the looks of his comic chin whiskers he has ploughed a pathway from hell to breakfast and stopped en passant to help with a little skyscraper excavation. And as usual he made a bee line streak for the kitchen. For the cook around this establishment is his especial buddy—the glutton. The way he works her for goodies is, as Skippy says, "most disgustful."

* * *

And I don't suppose I should tell this on the fraidy-cat. But he flies under the bed and hides when he sees a carpet-sweeper.

Wise Words

A friend is worth all hazards we can run. —Young.

Be to her faults a little blind.
—Prior.

O! what's a table richly spread,
Without a woman at its head?
—Wharton.

And we must forget because we must,
And not because we will.
—Arnold.

They that approve a private opinion call it opinion; but they that dislike it call it heresy; and yet heresy signifies no more than private opinion.—Hobbes.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

It is not the necessary expenses of homes that cause the most discussion or the greater number of quarrels.

Finances are responsible for most of the dissension and heated arguments of married life, but trouble hinges on unnecessary expenses.

The young couples with the smaller incomes vie with those who are older and better established and so they spend more than they can afford.

When housband, wife or children spend more than the family pocketbook warrants there will be serious trouble.

Demands are made by one or the other to cut down expenses.

One is willing and tries to whittle expenditures while other members of the family are selfish and take more than an equal share of available funds.

It is not fair of the one to want more and it is certainly unfair to the family to let one member have more than his or her rightful share.

It is hard to make children see the necessity for saving when they want this or that, hence the sooner they are put to earn living expenses the better for all concerned.
